

One Canadian Post

A LITERARY, POLITICAL, EDUCATIONAL, AND FAMILY JOURNAL

LINDSAY, C.W. THURSDAY, JAN. 8, 1863. (Terms: $1.50, in Advance.)

TERMS OF ADVERTISING. Ten lines and under... 75 Cents. Above Ten lines, first insertion, per line...

EVERY THURSDAY MORNING. OFFICE:—LINDSAY, C.W. And contains of the day: Agricultural and Commercial Notices...

Business Cards. LINDSAY, C.W. Noted.

LACOURSE, Barrister, Attorney-at-Law, Conveyancer, &c. Office—Kemp's Brick Buildings, Kent Street, Lindsay, C.W.

FREDERICK WHITT, Attorney-at-Law, Conveyancer, &c. Office—Kemp's Brick Buildings, Kent Street, Lindsay, C.W.

T. A. HITSPEITH, Barrister-at-Law, Notary Public, &c. Office—Kemp's Brick Buildings, Kent Street, Lindsay, C.W.

WELLER & BROTHUR, Barristers and Attorneys-at-Law, Solicitors in Chancery, Notaries Public, Conveyancers, &c.

J. McFADYEN, Attorney-at-Law, Solicitor in Chancery, Office—McDonald's Brick Building, corner of Kent and William Streets, Lindsay (above Broughall & Gilmour's Store), 131st.

R. L. BENSON, LL.B., Barrister and Attorney-at-Law, Solicitor in Chancery, Notary Public, Conveyancer, &c. Office in McDonald's Block, over Division Court, Lindsay, C.W.

M. DEANE, County Engineer and Provincial Land Surveyor, Russell Street, Sept. 5, 1861. 114-1f

ROBERT T. BURNS, Provincial Land Surveyor, Civil Engineer, Draughtsman, Land Agent, &c. Office—Corner of Kent and William Streets, over Mr. Thompson's Store, Lindsay, Sept. 5, 1861. 114-1f

C. BRADY, Civil Engineer and Provincial Surveyor, Office—Mr. Kemp's Building, Kent Street, Lindsay, C.W. 108-1f

DR. MARTIN, (LATE OF MANILLA), HAS Removed to Lindsay, for the practice of his profession, Office in Kemp's New Buildings, foot of Kent St. (up stairs), Jan. 8, 1863. 131-1f

JAMES H. KNIGHT, (Late Organist of Trinity Church, Galt) TEACHER OF THE PIANO-FORTE AND MELODEON. Residence at Mr. C. Britton's, Kent Street, LINDSAY.

MRS. LAWDER, RESPECTFULLY informs the Inhabitants of Lindsay that she has become a permanent resident amongst them, and that she is prepared to receive Pupils and give instructions on the Piano-Forte, and in Singing, on the most improved principles.

Mrs. L. feels confident that she will be able to give satisfaction to all who patronize her, she having received the most excellent education from the best masters in Great Britain and Ireland.

Mrs. L. also intimates that she brought out with her a very superior Piano, made by Godey, one of the best and best toned in London, England, and which was selected for her by the celebrated Robinson, of D. thin.

Residence: Near Dr. Fidler's, Russell Street, N.B.—Terms Moderate. 175-1f

M. J. B. LINDSAY & CO., Civil Engineers and Architects, Office in the same Buildings, Toronto.

W. J. D. LINDSAY and O. MONTAGNA, Painters and Plasterers, William Street, Lindsay. Country and other work attended to with promptness and dispatch. 114-1f

HENRY ROWLAND, Painter and Ornamental Paperhanger, Kent Street, Lindsay. All orders promptly and faithfully executed. 118-1f

WINTERS & GOODWIN, Painters, Glaziers and Paper-Hangers, William Street, Lindsay. Work executed promptly, neatly, and at the lowest prices. 123-1f

JOHN DOUGLASS, General Agent and Licensed Auctioneer, Cambridge Street, Lindsay. Orders solicited. 125-1f

J. LISLE, Butcher, and Dealer in all kinds of Meats, William Street, three doors from Peel Street, Lindsay. N.B.—Orders for every description of Meat solicited. 119-1f

PHOENIX-LIKE I RISE. HAVING been burned out by the late fire, I would inform the Public and my numerous Patrons, that I have opened my Shop on Kent Street, in Mr. Thirkell's Waggon Shop, three doors East of the Town Hall, where I am prepared to supply Goods and repair them. New Guns and Rifles made up to order, and warranted to shoot well. Double and Single Guns bored out, and warranted to improve the shooting of them. Feeling grateful for past favors, he solicits a continuance of them. C. PASSAGE. 114-1f

LINDSAY SADDLERY ESTABLISHMENT, South side of Kent Street, Three Doors West of Thompson's T Store. A choice lot of Saddles, Harness, Bridles, Whips, Spurs and Brushes, kept on hand. Superior Workmen employed, and choice material used. All work warranted. A call is solicited. GEO. C. ATKINSON. 114-1f

VICTORIA STORE, One Door West of Wright's Boot and Shoe Store. JOHN MOORE, PROPRIETOR.

All kinds of Job Work done on the shortest notice. A large quantity of Cooking, Dox and Parlor Stoves on hand; also, McGe's "Protectionist" patented last June—the best that has ever been offered to the public. Drums, Stoves, Reverse and Gallois Pipes, Store Pipes, and Tinware of every description. Merchants and Peddlers would do well to call and examine for themselves before purchasing elsewhere. The highest price paid for Sheepskins, and all kinds of produce when in exchange.

Business Cards. BEAVERTON.

GIBSON & BURNET, Provincial Land Surveyors, Draughtsmen, Land Agents, Conveyancers, &c. Plans and descriptions drawn up. Wild and other lands valued. Valuable lands for sale in adjoining townships. Office—Beaverton and Woodville. GEO. GIBSON, P. BURNET. 134-1f

S. G. WOOD, LL.B., Barrister and Attorney-at-Law, Solicitor in Chancery and Conveyancer, &c. MANILLA, C.W. 157-1f

Manilla House, Manilla. THE Undersigned here leave to inform his Friends and the Travelling Public that he has taken the above well-known Hotel, and treats, by strict attention to business, and by endeavoring to do all in his power for the comfort and convenience of guests, to merit a liberal patronage.

Comfortable accommodation for men and boys. Robt Pittman always in attendance to take charge of Teams. S. CONWAY, Proprietor. 117-1f

ADAM GORDON, DEALER IN DRY GOODS, GROCERIES, HARDWARE, CROCKERY, &c. &c. MANILLA, C.W. BEGS leave to inform the Public that he still continues to purchase Wheat, Pork, and other farm produce, at the highest Market Price. N.B.—Evens and Sheets for sale. Manilla, Sept. 5, 1861. 5-1f

OAKWOOD. BANKS' HOTEL, Main Street, Oakwood. Good Stabling and a careful Hotel. Wm. BANKS, Proprietor. 118-1f

WOODVILLE. NORTHERN HOTEL, Woodville, C.W. J. P. WOOD, Proprietor. Good accommodations for travellers. Charges moderate. 160

GILCHRIST & CAMERON, RETURN thanks to their Friends for the liberal patronage hitherto extended to them, are happy to announce that they are just receiving their Full and Winter Stock, which, for cheapness and quality, cannot be excelled in the Back Country.

Their TRAYS and other GROCERIES are of the same superior quality they used to keep. They have received a very select assortment of POCKET BIBLES, with Psalms and Paraphrases. The public are respectfully informed that G. G. Gilchrist & Cameron have their establishments, both at Woodville and Argyle, on very liberal terms. Woodville, Oct. 9, 1862. 170

LAW PARTNERSHIP. THE Undersigned have entered into partnership as Attorneys, Solicitors, Conveyancers, &c. under the style and name of McNEIL & McDOUGALL, Office—Opposite Court House, Adelaide Street, Toronto. JOHN McNEIL. WM. McDOUGALL. 134-1f

Advertising Essential to Business. AUGUSTUS WEBBER, EUROPEAN and Colonial Advertiser, and General Mercantile, Shipping and Railway Agent, Wellington Street, Toronto, C.W., receives Advertisements for insertion in all the Canadian, European and States Newspapers and Periodicals. Acknowledged Agent for this paper. June, 1862. 122-1f

QUEBEC. FRED. TAYLOR, Parliamentary, Land, & General Agent, PATENTS FOR CROWN LANDS OBTAINED. Claims before the Department of Crown Lands presented. Patents of Invention and General Business with the Public Offices attended to. Titles Examined and Legal Advice given free of charge.

References:—Hon. George S. Boulton, Cobourg; T. R. Merritt, Esq., St. Catharines; Hon. L. Tolson, Montreal; Hon. J. McDonald, Toronto; Hon. G. Alexander, Woodstock; Hon. J. Hamilton, Hawkesbury; Hon. D. Christie, Bradford; Hon. R. Matheson, Perth; G. J. Goodhue, London; Hon. A. Kierzkowski, St. Charles. OFFICE—Corner of Buade and Fort Streets, QUEBEC.

HENRY GRIST, Departmental and Parliamentary Agent, QUEBEC, Investigator and Adjuvator Crown Land Claims. Business with the Crown Land and other Government departments, which often takes months to do by correspondence, can be transacted in a few days, and at a small cost, by employing a resident agent, and at a small cost, by employing a resident agent, and at a small cost, by employing a resident agent.

DEEDS, MORTGAGES, ASSIGNMENTS, DISCHARGES, LEASES, and all kinds of MAGISTRATES' BLANKS. "Canadian Post" Book Store, Opposite the Post Office.

Poetry. AT THE LAST.

The stream is calmest when it nears the side, And flowers are sweetest at the evening tide, And birds most musical at close of day, And saints divinest when they pass away.

Morning is lovely; but a holier charm Lids folded close in Evening's robe of balm, And weary man must ever love her best, For Morning calls to toil, but Night to rest.

She comes from heaven, and on her wings doth bear, A holy fragrance, like the breath of prayer; Footsteps of angels follow in her train, To shunt the weary eyes of Day in peace;

All things are hushed before her, as she throes Over earth and sky her mantle of repose: There is a calm, a beauty and a power, That Morning knows not, in the Evening hour.

'Till the Evening we must weep and toil, Plough with life's stern furrow, dig the weedy soil, Tread with sad feet our rough and thorny way, And bear the heat and burden of the day.

Oh! when our sun is setting, may we glide Like Summer Evening down the golden tide, And leave behind us, as we glide away, Sweet, starry Twilight round our sleeping clay.

HOMEOPATHIC BROTH. Take a Robin's leg. (Mind, the dramatick merely). Put it in a tub. Fill'd with water nearly.

Set it out of doors. In a place that's shady; Let it stand a week. (Three, if for a lady).

Dip a spoonful in. To a five-pail kettle; It should be of tin, Or perhaps bell-metal.

Put it on a boiling. Skin the liquor well. To prevent its oiling.

For thickening and salt. Take of rice one kernel; Use, to light the fire. The Cold-Water Journal.

Let the liquor boil. Half an hour—no longer; (If 'tis for a man, You may make it stronger).

Should you now desire That the soup be flavory, Stir it once around With a stalk of savory.

When the broth is done, Set it by to 'jell' it; Then, three times a day, Let the patient suck it!

If he chancos to die, Say 'twas Nature did it; But if he should get well, Give the broth the credit!

Miscellaneous. ANTI-GARROTTE GLOVES.—The prevalence of garrotting in London has caused the production, among other protective, of a kind of anti-garrotte's gauntlet. They look like ordinary do skin gloves; but on the last joint of the middle finger and thumb is placed a sharp point of curved steel hooks about the size and shape of a parrot's beak, the lower of which is sharpened and cut like a knife. When the garrotte attacks his victim, the first effect of the steel point is to release his throat; he seizes hold of his antagonist's arm with these curved gloves, and produces there with such wounds as would cause the garrotter to speedily relax his hold from actual pain.

JUDGE NOT.—I would not have done this or that! How often do we hear this declaration! and how absurd it is. Who knows what persons may do till they are tried and tempted? Not we or you. It is one thing to sit calmly down and theorise about life and its mischances, and another to meet them face to face, when they sweep over us like a whirlwind. Therefore, when you see an erring brother who has committed a crime, do not say "I would not have done so." Wait till your turn comes, or rather, do not wait till then; avoid vain boasting, lest you lay it on Him who giveth life in time of our greatest need.

This is our safety in the difficult lesson of self-government.

ENGLISH GIRLS.—The English girl spends more than one-half of her waking hours in physical amusements, which tend to develop and invigorate and ripen the bodily powers. She rides, walks, drives, and rows upon the water, runs, dances, plays, sings, jumps the rope, throws the ball, hurds the quail, draws the bow, keeps up the shuttle-cock, and all this without having it pressed forward upon her mind that she is thereby wasting her time. She does this every day until it becomes a habit with her which she will follow up through life. Her frame, as a natural consequence, is large, her muscular system in better subordination, her strength more enduring, and the whole tone of her voice healthier.

PLEAS OF NOTES.—Most visitors to the great metropolis have seen the monument which is situated close to the north end of London Bridge. It is 200 feet in height, and one of the most imposing objects visible from the river. This monument will enable us to gauge our national expenditure on intoxicating drinks. Mr. G. R. Porter, of the Board of Trade, computed that these drinks cost the English people $75,000,000 annually. Had we could make twelve paise as high as the monument, at the rate of $500 for every inch, for persons who cross London Bridge, and view the summit of the monument, are aware of this remarkable fact; if they were, they would surely take care that their money was spent in a wiser manner.

REPENTANCE. A good husband will repair his house while the weather is fair, not put it off till winter; a careful pilot will take advantage of the wind and tide, and so put out to sea, not wait till a storm arise. The traveller will take his time on a journey, and mend his pace when night comes on, lest darkness overtake him; the smith will strike while the iron is hot, lest it grow cool, and so he loses his labor; so we ought to make every day the day of repentance; to make use of the present time, so that when we come to die, we have nothing to do but to die for there will be a time when the door will be shut, when the soul becomes conscious that there will be no entrance at all.

A ROLLING STONE GATHERS TO MOSS. Well, what of that? Who wants to be a tussle old stone, away in some dark corner of a pasture, where sunshine and fresh air never come, for the cows to rub themselves against, and for snails and bees to crawl over, and for toads to squat under among poisonous weeds, and for a rat to gnaw at, and for a fox to dig at? It is far better to be a smooth and polished stone, rolling along in the brooding stream of life, wearing off the rough corners, and bringing out the firm crystalline structure of the granite, or the delicate veins of the agate or the chalcography. It is this perpetual chafing and rubbing which current that shows what sort of grit a man is made of, and what use he is good for. Two or three weeks since the widow made a visit to Madison to investigate the probabilities and chances for a pension. The investigation was made, the business in the capital accomplished, and the widow was on her way home; and here commenced the strange part of the affair. On board the cars her widow fell into conversation with a very gentlemanly appearing fellow-passenger. From the weather and kindred topics, these social travellers went to other and more familiar ones.

Each was pleased with the conversational talent of the other, and tedium of railroad travel was agreeably relieved. In the course of the conversation, the "gay Lothario" had informed his companion that he was a travelling agent of some extensive dry goods firm in the Empire City; that he was well-to-do in the world, had a good salary, and only lacked a "better half" to take charge of his metropolitan home—to make his earthly bliss complete. Whether the widow was equally communicative and confidential as to her present status, we are not informed, though subsequent events would indicate that she was.

"Arriving at the 'City of Bricks,' the New York clerk informed the widow that he had engaged a private hack for the Newhall, and politely invited her to take a seat with him, and thus save all trouble and embarrassment. The kind offer was accepted with thanks, and the fellow-travellers thus prolonged their chat and improved their acquaintance. The Newhall was soon reached, the widow was shown into the ladies' parlor, her baggage looked after, and all things attended to.

"She had not long to sit in the parlor before her attentive and assiduous companion appeared and informed her that he had engaged a private room for her, and ordered a fire to be kindled for her comfort. He also asked permission to visit her in the evening, which was granted. The evening came, and with it the new acquaintance of the widow to wit away the long hours with pleasant converse. So mutually pleasant was the sweet interchange of thought, that the hours slipped away all too fast, and far too soon the "wee small hours" warned the lady to retire to her chamber. The nature of the evening's converse can only be surmised from what followed.

"Early the next morning a conveyance was obtained, and the couple left for a northern winter-place, lately made conspicuous by the temporary presence of war's gloomy visage. Here some "holy man" was found who soon performed the necessary rite, and the train were made one, and returned to the Newhall home and wife. Here they enjoyed a short honeymoon and then applied themselves to longer, had quite a sum of money with her, which she never again saw.

"It was now arranged that the late widow should visit her home, dispose of her property, and be ready to start for her new city home with her niece in three days. Her husband bought a ticket and she was found aboard the boat, and the same day she arrived at her old home, and then for the first time thought that she had not a cent of money with her. Strangely enough her husband had forgotten to give her purse; but then, that was of no account—she could manage to get along for three days.

"All the friends of the late widow were informed of her good fortune. She was in the best of spirits—her humble home was so soon to be changed for an imposing dwelling on Madison Square. Days passed—no husband came; but still the tramping heart of the waiting widow would not doubt. Weeks passed—no husband came; and not a word had she heard of money or spouse. The travelling agent of the outfit New York firm had most likely found it for the interest of his employers to travel in some other direction."

"The next morning a conveyance was obtained, and the couple left for a northern winter-place, lately made conspicuous by the temporary presence of war's gloomy visage. Here some "holy man" was found who soon performed the necessary rite, and the train were made one, and returned to the Newhall home and wife. Here they enjoyed a short honeymoon and then applied themselves to longer, had quite a sum of money with her, which she never again saw.

"It was now arranged that the late widow should visit her home, dispose of her property, and be ready to start for her new city home with her niece in three days. Her husband bought a ticket and she was found aboard the boat, and the same day she arrived at her old home, and then for the first time thought that she had not a cent of money with her. Strangely enough her husband had forgotten to give her purse; but then, that was of no account—she could manage to get along for three days.

"All the friends of the late widow were informed of her good fortune. She was in the best of spirits—her humble home was so soon to be changed for an imposing dwelling on Madison Square. Days passed—no husband came; but still the tramping heart of the waiting widow would not doubt. Weeks passed—no husband came; and not a word had she heard of money or spouse. The travelling agent of the outfit New York firm had most likely found it for the interest of his employers to travel in some other direction."

"The next morning a conveyance was obtained, and the couple left for a northern winter-place, lately made conspicuous by the temporary presence of war's gloomy visage. Here some "holy man" was found who soon performed the necessary rite, and the train were made one, and returned to the Newhall home and wife. Here they enjoyed a short honeymoon and then applied themselves to longer, had quite a sum of money with her, which she never again saw.

"It was now arranged that the late widow should visit her home, dispose of her property, and be ready to start for her new city home with her niece in three days. Her husband bought a ticket and she was found aboard the boat, and the same day she arrived at her old home, and then for the first time thought that she had not a cent of money with her. Strangely enough her husband had forgotten to give her purse; but then, that was of no account—she could manage to get along for three days.

"All the friends of the late widow were informed of her good fortune. She was in the best of spirits—her humble home was so soon to be changed for an imposing dwelling on Madison Square. Days passed—no husband came; but still the tramping heart of the waiting widow would not doubt. Weeks passed—no husband came; and not a word had she heard of money or spouse. The travelling agent of the outfit New York firm had most likely found it for the interest of his employers to travel in some other direction."

"The next morning a conveyance was obtained, and the couple left for a northern winter-place, lately made conspicuous by the temporary presence of war's gloomy visage. Here some "holy man" was found who soon performed the necessary rite, and the train were made one, and returned to the Newhall home and wife. Here they enjoyed a short honeymoon and then applied themselves to longer, had quite a sum of money with her, which she never again saw.

"It was now arranged that the late widow should visit her home, dispose of her property, and be ready to start for her new city home with her niece in three days. Her husband bought a ticket and she was found aboard the boat, and the same day she arrived at her old home, and then for the first time thought that she had not a cent of money with her. Strangely enough her husband had forgotten to give her purse; but then, that was of no account—she could manage to get along for three days.

"All the friends of the late widow were informed of her good fortune. She was in the best of spirits—her humble home was so soon to be changed for an imposing dwelling on Madison Square. Days passed—no husband came; but still the tramping heart of the waiting widow would not doubt. Weeks passed—no husband came; and not a word had she heard of money or spouse. The travelling agent of the outfit New York firm had most likely found it for the interest of his employers to travel in some other direction."

"The next morning a conveyance was obtained, and the couple left for a northern winter-place, lately made conspicuous by the temporary presence of war's gloomy visage. Here some "holy man" was found who soon performed the necessary rite, and the train were made one, and returned to the Newhall home and wife. Here they enjoyed a short honeymoon and then applied themselves to longer, had quite a sum of money with her, which she never again saw.

"It was now arranged that the late widow should visit her home, dispose of her property, and be ready to start for her new city home with her niece in three days. Her husband bought a ticket and she was found aboard the boat, and the same day she arrived at her old home, and then for the first time thought that she had not a cent of money with her. Strangely enough her husband had forgotten to give her purse; but then, that was of no account—she could manage to get along for three days.

"All the friends of the late widow were informed of her good fortune. She was in the best of spirits—her humble home was so soon to be changed for an imposing dwelling on Madison Square. Days passed—no husband came; but still the tramping heart of the waiting widow would not doubt. Weeks passed—no husband came; and not a word had she heard of money or spouse. The travelling agent of the outfit New York firm had most likely found it for the interest of his employers to travel in some other direction."

"The next morning a conveyance was obtained, and the couple left for a northern winter-place, lately made conspicuous by the temporary presence of war's gloomy visage. Here some "holy man" was found who soon performed the necessary rite, and the train were made one, and returned to the Newhall home and wife. Here they enjoyed a short honeymoon and then applied themselves to longer, had quite a sum of money with her, which she never again saw.

"It was now arranged that the late widow should visit her home, dispose of her property, and be ready to start for her new city home with her niece in three days. Her husband bought a ticket and she was found aboard the boat, and the same day she arrived at her old home, and then for the first time thought that she had not a cent of money with her. Strangely enough her husband had forgotten to give her purse; but then, that was of no account—she could manage to get along for three days.

"All the friends of the late widow were informed of her good fortune. She was in the best of spirits—her humble home was so soon to be changed for an imposing dwelling on Madison Square. Days passed—no husband came; but still the tramping heart of the waiting widow would not doubt. Weeks passed—no husband came; and not a word had she heard of money or spouse. The travelling agent of the outfit New York firm had most likely found it for the interest of his employers to travel in some other direction."

"The next morning a conveyance was obtained, and the couple left for a northern winter-place, lately made conspicuous by the temporary presence of war's gloomy visage. Here some "holy man" was found who soon performed the necessary rite, and the train were made one, and returned to the Newhall home and wife. Here they enjoyed a short honeymoon and then applied themselves to longer, had quite a sum of money with her, which she never again saw.

"It was now arranged that the late widow should visit her home, dispose of her property, and be ready to start for her new city home with her niece in three days. Her husband bought a ticket and she was found aboard the boat, and the same day she arrived at her old home, and then for the first time thought that she had not a cent of money with her. Strangely enough her husband had forgotten to give her purse; but then, that was of no account—she could manage to get along for three days.

"All the friends of the late widow were informed of her good fortune. She was in the best of spirits—her humble home was so soon to be changed for an imposing dwelling on Madison Square. Days passed—no husband came; but still the tramping heart of the waiting widow would not doubt. Weeks passed—no husband came; and not a word had she heard of money or spouse. The travelling agent of the outfit New York firm had most likely found it for the interest of his employers to travel in some other direction."

"The next morning a conveyance was obtained, and the couple left for a northern winter-place, lately made conspicuous by the temporary presence of war's gloomy visage. Here some "holy man" was found who soon performed the necessary rite, and the train were made one, and returned to the Newhall home and wife. Here they enjoyed a short honeymoon and then applied themselves to longer, had quite a sum of money with her, which she never again saw.

MARRIED IN HASTE TO REPENT AT LEISURE. The Kenosha Telegraph relates the following domestic romance. It is all about a widow lady, who, the paper hints, lives not a thousand miles from "there or thereabouts." The Telegraph says—

"The lady was a widow of recent date, her husband having quite lately fallen in the service of his country. The widow for a while was quite inconsolable; but time, the great healer of heart wounds, did wonders for her, and the smile came back to her brow and the light to her eye. Two or three weeks since the widow made a visit to Madison to investigate the probabilities and chances for a pension. The investigation was made, the business in the capital accomplished, and the widow was on her way home; and here commenced the strange part of the affair. On board the cars her widow fell into conversation with a very gentlemanly appearing fellow-passenger. From the weather and kindred topics, these social travellers went to other and more familiar ones.

Each was pleased with the conversational talent of the other, and tedium of railroad travel was agreeably relieved. In the course of the conversation, the "gay Lothario" had informed his companion that he was a travelling agent of some extensive dry goods firm in the Empire City; that he was well-to-do in the world, had a good salary, and only lacked a "better half" to take charge of his metropolitan home—to make his earthly bliss complete. Whether the widow was equally communicative and confidential as to her present status, we are not informed, though subsequent events would indicate that she was.

"Arriving at the 'City of Bricks,' the New York clerk informed the widow that he had engaged a private hack for the Newhall, and politely invited her to take a seat with him, and thus save all trouble and embarrassment. The kind offer was accepted with thanks, and the fellow-travellers thus prolonged their chat and improved their acquaintance. The Newhall was soon reached, the widow was shown into the ladies' parlor, her baggage looked after, and all things attended to.

"She had not long to sit in the parlor before her attentive and assiduous companion appeared and informed her that he had engaged a private room for her, and ordered a fire to be kindled for her comfort. He also asked permission to visit her in the evening, which was granted. The evening came, and with it the new acquaintance of the widow to wit away the long hours with pleasant converse. So mutually pleasant was the sweet interchange of thought, that the hours slipped away all too fast, and far too soon the "wee small hours" warned the lady to retire to her chamber. The nature of the evening's converse can only be surmised from what followed.

"Early the next morning a conveyance was obtained, and the couple left for a northern winter-place, lately made conspicuous by the temporary presence of war's gloomy visage. Here some "holy man" was found who soon performed the necessary rite, and the train were made one, and returned to the Newhall home and wife. Here they enjoyed a short honeymoon and then applied themselves to longer, had quite a sum of money with her, which she never again saw.

"It was now arranged that the late widow should visit her home, dispose of her property, and be ready to start for her new city home with her niece in three days. Her husband bought a ticket and she was found aboard the boat, and the same day she arrived at her old home, and then for the first time thought that she had not a cent of money with her. Strangely enough her husband had forgotten to give her purse; but then, that was of no account—she could manage to get along for three days.

"All the friends of the late widow were informed of her good fortune. She was in the best of spirits—her humble home was so soon to be changed for an imposing dwelling on Madison Square. Days passed—no husband came; but still the tramping heart of the waiting widow would not doubt. Weeks passed—no husband came; and not a word had she heard of money or spouse. The travelling agent of the outfit New York firm had most likely found it for the interest of his employers to travel in some other direction."

"The next morning a conveyance was obtained, and the couple left for a northern winter-place, lately made conspicuous by the temporary presence of war's gloomy visage. Here some "holy man" was found who soon performed the necessary rite, and the train were made one, and returned to the Newhall home and wife. Here they enjoyed a short honeymoon and then applied themselves to longer, had quite a sum of money with her, which she never again saw.

"It was now arranged that the late widow should visit her home, dispose of her property, and be ready to start for her new city home with her niece in three days. Her husband bought a ticket and she was found aboard the boat, and the same day she arrived at her old home, and then for the first time thought that she had not a cent of money with her. Strangely enough her husband had forgotten to give her purse; but then, that was of no account—she could manage to get along for three days.

"All the friends of the late widow were informed of her good fortune. She was in the best of spirits—her humble home was so soon to be changed for an imposing dwelling on Madison Square. Days passed—no husband came; but still the tramping heart of the waiting widow would not doubt. Weeks passed—no husband came; and not a word had she heard of money or spouse. The travelling agent of the outfit New York firm had most likely found it for the interest of his employers to travel in some other direction."

"The next morning a conveyance was obtained, and the couple left for a northern winter-place, lately made conspicuous by the temporary presence of war's gloomy visage. Here some "holy man" was found who soon performed the necessary rite, and the train were made one, and returned to the Newhall home and wife. Here they enjoyed a short honeymoon and then applied themselves to longer, had quite a sum of money with her, which she never again saw.

"It was now arranged that the late widow should visit her home, dispose of her property, and be ready to start for her new city home with her niece in three days. Her husband bought a ticket and she was found aboard the boat, and the same day she arrived at her old home, and then for the first time thought that she had not a cent of money with her. Strangely enough her husband had forgotten to give her purse; but then, that was of no account—she could manage to get along for three days.

"All the friends of the late widow were informed of her good fortune. She was in the best of spirits—her humble home was so soon to be changed for an imposing dwelling on Madison Square. Days passed—no husband came; but still the tramping heart of the waiting widow would not doubt. Weeks passed—no husband came; and not a word had she heard of money or spouse. The travelling agent of the outfit New York firm had most likely found it for the interest of his employers to travel in some other direction."

"The next morning a conveyance was obtained, and the couple left for a northern winter-place, lately made conspicuous by the temporary presence of war's gloomy visage. Here some "holy man" was found who soon performed the necessary rite, and the train were made one, and returned to the Newhall home and wife. Here they enjoyed a short honeymoon and then applied themselves to longer, had quite a sum of money with her, which she never again saw.

"It was now arranged that the late widow should visit her home, dispose of her property, and be ready to start for her new city home with her niece in three days. Her husband bought a ticket and she was found aboard the boat, and the same day she arrived at her old home, and then for the first time thought that she had not a cent of money with her. Strangely enough her husband had forgotten to give her purse; but then, that was of no account—she could manage to get along for three days.

"All the friends of the late widow were informed of her good fortune. She was in the best of spirits—her humble home was so soon to be changed for an imposing dwelling on Madison Square. Days passed—no husband came; but still the tramping heart of the waiting widow would not doubt. Weeks passed—no husband came; and not a word had she heard of money or spouse. The travelling agent of the outfit New York firm had most likely found it for the interest of his employers to travel in some other direction."

"The next morning a conveyance was obtained, and the couple left for a northern winter-place, lately made conspicuous by the temporary presence of war's gloomy visage. Here some "holy man" was found who soon performed the necessary rite, and the train were made one, and returned to the Newhall home and wife. Here they enjoyed a short honeymoon and then applied themselves to longer, had quite a sum of money with her, which she never again saw.

"It was now arranged that the late widow should visit her home, dispose of her property, and be ready to start for her new city home with her niece in three days. Her husband bought a ticket and she was found aboard the boat, and the same day she arrived at her old home, and then for the first time thought that she had not a cent of money with her. Strangely enough her husband had forgotten to give her purse; but then, that was