A horse with a snake in his eye has been advertised to be seen: at Burnett's hotel. The writer has seen the horse and the snake. The horse is grey, a fine useful animal, rising ten years old. He belongs to a Mr. Youmans, a respectable farmer living near Picton. The snake is a parasite—probably a filaria—there are many species of this entozoon (which means a parasite animal, living within the body), and this is one. It is several inches long, apparently four or five, is about the diameter of a large fiddle string, and is in perpetual motion—coiling rapidly round and round within itself. The cornea, or glass of the eye, is slightly milky, from the irritation of the beast inside, or possibly from the effects of alum, which the owner had foolishly blown upon the eye to cure a fittle redness of the lid. Sight is destroyed in that eye, the other being healthy. The animal was first noticed in the about four months ago, but it had probably been there much longer. Since it was first observed it has grown a good deal. How did this beast get into his eye? Our intelligent readers know that the idea of spontaneous Not generation of animals or plants is well exploded—that no animal or plant is produced without a germ or parent—then how came this filaria in the horses eye? The germ of this particular species has got into the horse's stomach, in his food or drink-perhaps millions of germs were introduced at the same time-for a million would make little more than a speck in size—and this one being absorbed by the lacteals into the blood, was conveyed into the circulation, round and round, may-be an infinite number of times, till at last it chanced to arrive at the eye-its proper nidus, where it formed its appropriate pabulum, and has grown from an invisible atom in size to that of a in Lindsay by C. THE BANK OF NORTHUMBERLAND dealers.

We are pleased to learn that the application to the Legislature for a charter to incorporate this projected institution will immediately be made. The required board of provisional directors has been formed, and contains, among others, the well-known names of our townsmen, Geo. E. Jones, Esq., Dr. Gilchrist, George S. Daintry, Esq., Charles Gifford, Esq., John C. Field, Esq., and A. Fraser, Esq., whilst the interest of the town of Peterboro' is represented by the equally well known name of the Rev. Mark Burnham. The object of the new bank, with its branch at Peterboro', will be to assist in developing the resources of the towns of Cobourg and Peterboro'. We heartily wish success to this projected institution, for the want of a local bank, managed by local directors.
