As stirred with the triumphant notes,

'Tis morn on green Australia's woods, The broad Pacific's kindling floods Flushed with warm sunlight glow; Satisfaction given in every case. A trumpet wakes the silent dawn-The war drum sweeps the summons on— Far, far the glad sounds flow.

O'er spicy wave and Indian Isle, Such strains still greet the day-god's smile— Breaks the bold Briton's rest;— Fort William's stern reveille beats-O'er realm and main the brave sound fleets, O'er the wild Afghans' far retreats To Ghuznee's vanquished crest.

Awake, pale giant of the Cape! The sunlight gilds thy phantom shape; Wake, Mount of Lions, stern and hear, Tis morn on Afric's golden shore, Then the bold echoes ring-Answers the Spaniard's ærial height-Hear the wild music sing. Nor silent sleeps the Atlantic wave-The chorus bursts once more, Up from the Gallic thunder's grave, Bermuda's summer shore.

Fair Britain's voice is swelling now. Round old Quebec's embattled brow-On, on, the war-strains sweep! O'er Erie's wave, and soft St. Clair,-Fresh clarions waft the burden there O'er Huron's giant deep ;-Lone wood and lake the glad sounds wake, Till Columbia's rushing river Sweeps the tribute song to the main along-Old Britain's might forever!

The martial notes of Britain! They have a nobler tale Than the charging word, the flashing sword, There man's worst despots fly ;-Upsprings the slave-his chain is riven! The Christian altar points to Heaven,-Bright Freedom's triumph's high! And while a dwelling rests on earth For genius, chivalry or worth, Shall grateful millions pray "Let victory bless fair Britain's clime-Darling of Fame's heroic rhyme! ABROGATION OF RECIPROCITY.

From the Trade Review. The abrogation of the Reciprocity Treaty being no longer an impossible contingency, two important questions naturally present stances. Nothing can be more certain than that reciprocal trade has largely benefitted both the United States and Canada. It is self-evione while he was asleep ; and, although the dent, therefore, that its abolition would inmoney was not found on him, he was sen- flict a certain amount of injury upon both tenced to be hung, and had been removed to the old stone juil at Redchiff for security, the no reason to regard this result with such county jail being deemed unsafe. This was gloomy apprehensions as many indulge in. the day the execution was to take place; the scaffold was already erected; the crowd at first, and serve afterwards, to some extent, our agricultural productions will remain without purchasers, or that we are so de-that all was ready for him without, and bade him hasten to his execution; they laid hands upon him and pinioned him tight, while he could hardly take place at a more favourable looked towards heaven in wild astonishment time than the present. Not to speak of the as one new born and said: "The dream! progress made by this Province since 1854, the late rebellion has largely altered the posi-tion of the two countries. We are, compara-Sheriff. "You would do me a great kind-ness, if you would dream yourself and me more heavily taxed. The burden of taxation presses on the American farmer as upon "I dreamed," replied the convict, "that all other classes. They cannot raise their while you read the death warrant to me on crops so cheaply as before the war, and consequently the prices of produce must rule and stood before us in a grey dress, with a high in their markets. Doubtless the white hat, accompanied with many hints it would be better if our flour, grain, lumber, live stock, &c., continued to pass across the lines without "let or hindrance." But even should we be required to pay 20 per cent. duty, we will still occupy quite as favourable a position as our neighbours themselves. Under the most adverse circumstances, the loss of Reciprocity to Canada would not likely be more than $3,000,000 per annum -that is 20 per cent. on $15,000,000, the with a scrutiny that seemed like faith in average annual amount of our free exports. dreams; and while the Sheriff read the warrants, the convict's anxiety seemed to increase; he looked again; and then raised At present, a large proportion of American his hands and eyes a moment toward the purchases of Canadian wheat and flour are clear sky, as if breathing his last ejaculation, for export to Europe. HORTICULTURE IN GREECE.

Attica is so sweet that everything planted in it acquires an additional delicacy of flavour. Thus, pear trees transplanted from Malta to the gardens of Maronsi, a village about six miles from Athens, not only produce more delicious pears, but begin to bear the very first season. If such be the case now when gardening can hardly be said to be studied at all in the dominions of the young Danish king, what must it have been of old, when the most practiced, skillful, and studious of gardeners exhausted their ingenuity in the attempt to please the palates of their fast dious countrymen. We have said that the grounds of an Athenian gentleman were devoted partly to flowers, partly to vegetables, and partly to trees; but there was a peculiar order in the arrangement, by which what was beautiful was brought under the eye, while that which merely ministered to utility was fenced off, and screened from observation by copse of angus, cactus, or the rododendrons, or myrtle, or orleanders, which, at the proper periods of year, extended a blaze of blossoms between the kitchen garden and the floral department. Among the citizens of the "fierce democracy," something of oriental tastes and manners continued to prevail down to a very late period; the windows of the female apartments were usually turned towards the garden, so that, shaded by amber or purple hangings, they could lean on the sills of marble or carved cedar and gaze forth in the cool of the morning upon the bouquets of arbutus, or the broad waves a of pear, apple and pomegranate blossoms, which led the eye towards the foot of Hymettus, the lome of the Attic bee, or down to the banks of Ilissus, shaded by plane trees, and dotted at intervals by cupolas of white marble, which glittered like newly carved alabaster in the sun. And here we may as well notice a trait of Athenian manners, which will be thought to reflect some cred.t on the enterprising and grasping Demas, as the men of Dorion blood were wont to denominate it. So little fear had gentlemen that their gardens would be plundered by the people, that footpaths often traversed their orchards, their vineyards, and their kitchen gardens. One man's grounds were, moreover, separated from another's, not by high walls and insurmountable fences, but by rows of olives or plane trees, thirty or forty feet apart; or by loose hedges of the fragrant phillyrea, with frequent gaps and customary among the more opulent and noble citizens to invite the people not only to stroll at will through their grounds, but whenever they thought proper to pluck and eat the fruit; and there is no instance on record of this liberty being abused.
