if a second deluge were at hand. Conund the breakfast bell! I wish there was a such thing as a breakfast on a rainy using t for then one might lie abed all ay, or until the storm cleared off. Philophiers tell us that rain is necessary for ne economy of nature; it may be true, hough I never troubled myself about such aings; but if so, men ought to be made like here, eight miles or more from town, to bee a country wedding, "after the odr used among Friends." I must say that the thing was very handsomely done, and that I was much edified—so one of these days I will tell you how the parties deported themselves, how many new hats there were in the wedding company, who drove the finest horses, and all other matters of gossip so interesting to young misses and old backelors like myself. The day passed off with a bright blue sky, until towards dust when a thunder shower came up that lasted till bed-time; but I retired fully resolved that the morning would see a clear morning over my head; but the merning had come, and here it was, pouring down in one dark, splashy, continuous atream, for all the world like an old maid's was taken all aback. bjurgations when her tongue gets wagging, Down I hurried to the breakfast table. 1 had just buttered my bread, and was ing the first mouthful of coffee, hen the horn of the coach to town was heard, and looking out of the window, I saw.

only chance to reach the city that day. I bolted my bread, gulped down the coffee till my throat was scalded, jammed my hat on my head, and made a dive through the door. The driver did not see ma, but ked his whip with a flourish and went one I shouted; still the old villain did not notice me, but with another flourish of his whip, set his four-in-hand on a brisk trot, and rattled down the hill. Desperate with the fear of being left, I nitched after him, scattering the mud around at every step, and shouting at the top of my lungs; but I might have shouted on till doomsday, had not a passenger seen me, and stopped the old sinner. Out of breath, wet to the skin, covered with mud from head to food, and not in the best humour from the loss of my breakfast, 1 mounted into the coach; but the instant I placed my ford inside the vehicle, all my sulkiness vanished, for one of the loveliest angels that ever blessed a rickety old coach or warmed the soul of a sour, breakfastless bachelor with her presence, sat upon the back seat.

Did you ever fall in love! Of course, and the lady was the loveliest of her sex? te be sure, Then the stage coach beauty was twice as handsome as your sweet heart; and if, after this, you don't think my fellow passenger a chernb, then I give up all hope of making you appreciate her. Such eyes, such teeth and them lips - egad! It almost makes me crazy to think of them. I put myself down for the luckiest dog in the world. She was dressed in a plain straw cottage bonnet, with a green veilwears when traveling"-and then she gave me such a sweet but half roguish smile as I tumbled into the coach in the plight I have described, that I knew her at once to be a paragon in the way of education, taste, fortune, and all that; and I resolved-what knowing one would not ?-to make the agreeable off hand, for there is nothing like meeting an heiress in a stage-coach, where she thinks she is unknown, and dreams that every attention paid to her springs from true love-ahem !-- on your part.

I was in clover. What cared I for rain? Splash, splash, aye! rain away there like blazes-who cares? One dosen't get a tete-a-tete with a pretty girl every day of the week-so I determined to make the best of it.

And, faith, with a few sly compliments and my extraordinary good looks I soon got as cosy with my unknown beauty, and she with me, as if we had been acquainted since the days of Noah. We talked of the scenery, of the rain, and of whatever came uppermost; and there was such a charming frankness in all she said, that I really thought her the most winning little creature I had ever seen; and I verily believe if the floor had been softer, and I had known the accurate number of houses which I would be tenant, in courtesy, I should have gone down on my knees to her at once. I hate showing one's learning off in public, so I avoided anything like literature, though I saw by the intelligent eyes of the charmer that she had a soul alive to all the finer sensibilities of nature. At length we got on the subject of housekeeping. Now, if there is anything I hate, it is a woman that can't keep house, and I trembled at every word, lest my charmer should contess her ignorance of these matters. Shade of Apicius! how my heart leaped when she told me that hardly a day passed in which she did not bake bread, or pies, or sponge-cake, or some other of those shimshaws that delight the heart of a man; and in expatiating on such delicacies she rose to a pitch of eloquence that I never heard surpassed. I And the lingering beams of golden light,

And the lingering beams of golden light,

And the lingering beams of golden light,

Made his kindly old face look warm and bright, could not resist my feelings, but enatched her hand to my tips and kissed it.

Yes! I felt that she was destined to be mine, for if there is anything that a wife mine, for if there is anything that a wife There were angels waiting for him, I know; ought to know it is this. I come of a race He was sure of happiness, living or dead, My father can break his fast on a brace of casens or devour a pair of turkeys without halting to pick his teeth; and a brottler of since can tuck in a hundred oysters and dishes of chicken salad which does honor to the family. My own exploits in this ocheated in my hole. What doo't think so cheated in my loile. What doo't think my modesty forbids me to mention. No wender I loved this rosy little benefity who would get up such a choice. What doo't think and bake such delicious cakes. Abliving the family who would get up such a choice is many a score of times her arms are loike thoine and mione, although I have heard our exceptions from Court at might, to meet a beefficient of the lowest of the lowest prices, at the family, to meet a beefficient of the lowest of the lowest prices, at lower than the lowest lower than the lower lower lower than the lower lo richest soup served up by the fair hand of the angel at my side. I resolved if there was any virtue in a pair of whisters, in any eloquent tongue, or in my new blue coat to win this seraph of pie-makers.

There is no place like a stage-coach for making love. It comes natural! You do it, egad, in an easy, don't-care for-anyathing style, that you coult for the life of you assume in any the place. What hetwirt sitting on the take seat to talk more conveniently, and putting your arm around her waist to keep her from jolting off, you soon get to be wonderful cozy, and ten to one if you don't catch yourself squeezing her hand or varying the entertainment in some other way before you are aware of it,

How I thanked my stars that I had hitherto set my face like a flint against every temptation to marry-for now my firmness was rewarded by this beauty and heiress dropping into my mouth. And then I preached to myself a mental homily on the short sightedness of man, as I ventured to steal another kiss from the conscious and blushing little angel at my side. I was about to pop the question itself when the coach stopped, and the driver descended and opened the door. My charmer prose. I > " Do you get out here ?" said I, in sur-"Yes," said she, "I see Mr. Powell is waiting for me." "Mr. Powell," said I, for that was the name ot a friend of mine who lived up this the vehicle, with its four smoking horses, dashing down the turnpike. It was my to myself, "I never heard him speak of this chaiming creature."

Before I could answer Powell approached and while he hailed me my fellow passenger sprang to the ground as if by magic. and the next minute was in my friend's vehicle.

" For heaven's sake," said I, half mad that the hearty grip of Powell prevented me from hastening to his ward's assistance, who is that angel? Is she a relative, a ward, or what? I'm dying for love of her,

"Come, my dear boy," he said, "don't get into a passion, but consider how odd it is that you of all men, should fall in love with my cook."

I never make acquaintance in a stage coach now, until I have exchanged cards.

THE JOLLY OLD PEDAGOGUE. BY GEORGE ARNOLD

'Twas a jolly old pedagogue, long ago, Tall and slender, sallow and dry: His form was bent, and his gait was slow. His long thin hair was as white as snow, But a wonderful twinkle shone in his eye; And he sang every night as he went to bed. "Let us be happy down here below: The living should live, though the dead be

Said the jolly old pedagogue, long ago-He taught his scholars the rule of three. Writing and reading and history, too; He took the little ones up on his knee, For a kind old heart in his breast had he And the wants of the littlest child he knew: Learn while you're young," he often said, "There's much to enjoy down here below. Life for the living and rest for the dead!"
Said the jolly old pedagogue long ago.

With the stupidest boys he was kind and cool, Speaking only in gentlest terms
The rod was hardly known in his school— Whipping to him, was a barbarous rule, And too hard work for his poor old bones; Besides, it was painful, he sometimes said :

"We should make life pleasant down here below. The living need charity more than the dead." Said the jolly old pedagogue long ago."

He lived in the house by the hawthorn lane. With roses and woodbine over the door; His rooms were quiet and neat and plain,
But a spirit of comfort there held reign,
And made him forget he was old and poor; "I need so little," he often said

"And my friends and relatives here below,

Won't litigate over me when I am dead;" Said the jolly old pedagogue, long ago.

But the pleasantest time that he had of all, Were the sociable hours he used to pass, With the chair tipped back to a neighbour's Making an unceremonious call, Over a pipe and a friendly glass: This was the finest pleasure, he said, Of the many he tasted here below; Who has no cronies had better be dead!" Said the jolly old pedagogue long ago.

Then the jolly old pedagogue's wrinkled face, Melted all over with sunshiny smiles; He stirred his glass with an old-school grace Chuckled, and sipped, and prattled apace,
Till the house grew merry from cellar to tiles:
"I'm a pretty old man" he gently said; "I have lingered a long while here below; But my heart is fresh, if my youth is fled !"

Said the jolly old pedagogue long ago.

He smoked his pipe in the balmy air, Every night when the sun went down, While the soft wind played in his silvery hair,
Leaving its tenderest kisses there,
On the jolly old pedagogne's jolly crown:
And feeling the kisses, he smiled, and said, 'Twas a glorious world, down here below Why wait for happiness till we are dead?" Said the jolly old pedagogue, long ago.

He sat at his door, one midsummer night, After the sun had sunk in the West, While the odorous night wind whispered
