SONG OF THE CAMP.

Literary Selections. BY BAYARD TAYLOR.

"Give us a song!" the soldiers cried,
The outer treuches guarding,
When the heated guns of the camps allied
Grew weary of bombarding.

"We storm the forts to-morrow; Sing while we may, another day Will bring enough of sorrow."

They lay along the battery's side,

Below the smoking cannon:
Brave hearts, from Severn and from Clyde, And from the banks of Shannon. They sang of love, and not of fame Forgot was Britain's glory .

Each heart recalled a different name, But all sang "Annie Lawrie." Voice after voice caught up the song, Until its tender passion

Rose like an anthem, rich and strong,-Their battle-eye confession Dear girl, her name he dared not speak, But, as the song grew louder,

Something upon the soldi r's cheek Washed off the stains of powder; Beyond the darkening ocean burned, The bloody sunset's embers, While the Crimean valleys learned

How English love remembers. And once again a fire of hell Rained on the Russian quarters. With scream of shot, and burst of shell,

And bellowing of the mortars! And Irish Nora's eyes are dim For a singer, dumb and gory; And English Mary mourns for him Who sang of "Annie Laurie."

Sleep, soldiers! still in honored rest Your truth and valor wearing : The bravest are the tenderest,-The loving are the daring.

This little womanly triumph gave Bessie quite a glow of pleasant anticipation. She settled it all in her own mind, Maggie was to go to the seasi le when she was able to travel, but at the end of November she was to return to Bessie's house to spend her twenty-first birthday and the Christmas houdays. Theu Bessie was to give a party, at which, of course, Stanley Newcome was to be present, and Maggie, in the full blaze of her recovered beauty, was to have a certain victory over her craven-hearted admirer.
