

THE DAISY CHAIN.
Little children, glad and merry, Tudle, romp, and race along,
Hand in hand,
In a ring, hand,
With trills of laughter and of song.
Silver treasure without measure Shines upon the sunny fields;
Every elf
Dwells there self,
Which all the ground in plenty yields.
Now they weave a chain of daisies; Link by link it longer grows,
But a hand Breaks through the band, And all around the treasure flows.
Life is such a chain of daisies, Each on the other must depend;
One ruble break
A breach will make,
That never wishes not to mend.

SLEEP AND DEATH.
As men begin to be about fifty years old, especially of sedentary habits, the feeling of rousing in the morning is, not as they had gotten enough of sleep, not as much as they used to have, and as if they would like to have more but cannot get it. They look upon a healthy child sleeping with envy. But it is curious to observe that there is bliss in all in the act of going to sleep, a bliss which becomes cognizant of only when we happen to be aroused just as we are falling into a strong sleep; and there are strong physiological reasons to suppose that this state is the counterpart of the great event that comes to all in the act of dying.
In fact, those who have, in rare cases been brought to life, when on their extreme verge, and in several cases as to those who have been recovered from drowning and other modes of strangulation, or simple asphyxiation, the expressions have been on returning to consciousness, "How delicious is my sleep! Why did you not let me go?" An enraptured man thus brought back, represented that the last sensation of which he was conscious were as if he were listening to the most ravishing strains of music. Let us all, then, cherish the thought that our approach to the sleep of the grave is the strict counterpart of the approach of sleep.

BEER VS. WINE.
An American now travelling in Germany writes as follows to a western paper:
"In Southern Germany, where wine is not at all dear, beer has almost entirely supplanted it in popular favor, and in Switzerland it is rapidly doing so. The demand for beer is not easily met even in Bavaria, where it is made in altogether the largest quantities of any German state, and the price at the breweries is two cents a glass, while at railway stations, and indeed in almost all public places, it is three cents a glass. In Northern Germany, even in Saxony and Southern Prussia, the Bavarian beer is as in such repute as to command six cents the glass, and to sell freely at that price. In Switzerland it is still more dear; a quart bottle costing more than a franc. The demand is rapidly increasing, and while the vineyards are a good source of income, the breweries are yet more valuable. In France, too, beer is becoming more and more a favorite; and, indeed, it is a fact that in all the countries with which I have any acquaintance there is the same rapid increase in the demand for beer, which we have witnessed during the past few years in America.
Before it wine seems to stand no chance; almost every one prefers the slight bitterness, the invigorating nourishment and real strength of the Bavarian beer to the thinness and sweetness of the native wines of this country."

GOING TO THE FOUNTAIN HEAD.
In Nottingham, Birmingham, and other towns, I know that there are thousands of small, puny infants, who toil every day from morning to noon, and from noon to night, to feed the drunkenness of their fathers and mothers, and society has allowed that horrid system to go on, and never minded. The consequence is, that in England, and Scotland too, there are thousands of girls that go wrong, and cannot but go wrong. Here, too, of girls, we brought up in the filthiest dens, and in the midst of the filthiest and most abominable houses; and I hold it is impossible with such houses, and with such moral and physical abnormalities surrounding them, that they grow up anything but criminals.
I believe my own children if they had been exposed to such influences, and lived in such places, would have been no better. Until society goes to the spring from which their evils flow, by providing better means of education for their children, they will be no better. If society did as it ought, there would not be a single child left without food and raiment, nor a single boy or girl brought up without education.—Dr.
Cuthbert.

JUDAS ISCARIOT.
Ruskin, the eloquent critic, speaks thus of Judas Iscariot in thinking him weakened by all common wickedness. He was only a common money lover, and like all money lovers, did not understand Christ; could not make out the worth of Him, or the meaning of Him. He was horror-struck when he found that Christ would be killed; but his money away instantly and hanged himself. How many of our present money lovers, thank you, would have the grace to hang themselves, whoever was killed?
But Judas was a common, selfish, middle-headed, pitiful fellow; his hand always in the bag of the poor, not caring for them. He did not understand Christ; yet believed in him much more than most of us; had seen Him do miracles, thought he was quite strong enough to shift for himself, and he, Judas, might quite as well make his own little by-prisquites out of the affair. Christ would come out well enough and he might have his thirty pieces."

A TRAVELLER'S EXPERIENCE OF WOMAN.
I have observed among all nations, that the women ornament themselves more than the men; that wherever found they are the same kind, civil, obliging, humane, tender beings; that they are ever inclined to be gay and cheerful, timorous and modest. They do not hesitate, like men, to perform a hospitable action; not haughty, nor arrogant, nor supercilious, economical, ingenious; more liable in general to err than man, but in general also more virtuous, never addressed myself in the language of decency and friendship to a woman, whether civilized or savage, without receiving a decent and friendly answer. With man it has often been otherwise. In wandering over the barren plains of inhospitable Denmark, through honest Sweden, frozen Lapland, rude and churlish Finland, unprincipled Russia, and the wide-spread regions of the wandering Tartar, a hungry, dry, cold, wet, or sick, woman has ever been friendly to me, and uniformly so; and to add to this virtue, so worthy of the appellation of benevolence, their actions have been performed in so free and so kind a manner, that, if I was dry, I drank the sweetest draught, and if hungry, ate the coarse morsel with a double relish.

A KNOW-NOTHING
They have smart children in a certain part of Vermont. A school-mistress of the Green Mountain State relates the following example of a boy's intelligence: A large, overgrown boy came to school one morning, and I enquired of him,—
"Can you read?"
"Don't know," was the reply.
"Can't you spell easy words?"
"Don't know."
"Do you know the alphabet?"
"Yes."
"Try this word."
"H-o-r-s-e."
"What does that spell?"
"Don't know."
"What do you ride on at home?"
"Oxen."
"Try this word."
"B-e-a-u-t-y."
"What does that spell?"
"Don't know."
"What do you eat at home?"
"Dumplings."
"Try this short word."
"B-e-a-u-t-y."
"Well, what does that spell?"
"Don't know."
"What do you sleep on at night?"
"Sleepskins."
I sent him to his seat, after this trial, and took rest.

A well known clergyman was crossing Lake Erie, many years ago, upon one of the Lake steamers, and seeing a small lad at the wheel, steering the boat, accosted him as follows:
"My son, you appear to be a small boy to steer so large a boat."
"Yes sir, you see that I can do it though."
"Do you think you understand your business my son?"
"Yes, sir, I think I do."
"Can you box the compass?"
"Yes, sir."
"Let me hear you box it."
"Box the compass."
"Well, really, you can do it! Let me hear you box it backward."
"Box boxes it backward."
"I declare, my son, you do seem to understand your business." The boy now took his turn at question asking.
"Sit what might be your business?"
"I am a minister of the Gospel."
"Do you understand your business?"
"I think I do, my son."
"Can you say the Lord's Prayer?"
"Yes, sir."
"Say it."
Clergyman repeats the Lord's prayer.
"Well, really, you do know it! Now say it backward."
Clergyman says he cannot do it.
"You can't do it, eh! Now you see that I understand my business great deal better than you do yours!" Clergyman acknowledged himself beat, and retired.

WHAT THEY EAT AT XENIA.
The "Fat Contributor" gives the following experience of endeavoring to get dinner at Xenia on the Little Miami railroad.
"Twenty minutes for dinner," shouted brake-man as we approached Xenia.
Arrived there, I entered the dining room and inquired of a waiter,
"What do you have for dinner?"
"Twenty minutes," was the hurried reply.
I told him I would try half a dozen minutes, raw, not the half-shell, just to see how they went. Told him to make a minute of it on his books. He scratched his head trying to comprehend the order but finally gave it up and waited upon some one else.
I approached a man who stood by the door with a roll of money in his hand.
"What do you have for dinner?"
"Half a dollar," said he.
I told him I would take half a dollar well done. I asked him if he couldn't send me, in addition, a boiled pocket-book stuffed with greenbacks, and some seventies, garnished with postage stamps and ten cent scrip. Also a Confederate bond, done brown, with lettuce alone [let us alone.] I would like to wash my dinner down with National Bank Notes, on "draft."
He said they were out of everything but the bank notes, and he then ordered a water to go to the bank and "draw" some.

THE FENIAN PRISONERS.
The Government is gradually obtaining information relative to the part taken by the Fenian prisoners at present in the hands of the authorities here. Yesterday two gentlemen from Fort Erie visited the goal, with the object of identifying some six or eight, among them the Roman Catholic priest, McMahon, as having done with the Fenians when they landed in the village. They were quite confident as to their men, even when put into a change of of clothing by the Governor of the goal, picked them out from among the whole number without any difficulty. There are yet some sixteen of the ninety-three prisoners against whom no positive proof has been obtained, and a few of these are believed to be innocent. One, a man named James Hill, resident of Fort Erie, who was arrested while on a drunken spree a few days after the arrival of our troops, is said to have been a perfectly loyal individual, though in doubtful company. His friends live above Hamilton.—"G.L.C."
