In this miserable condition, with naked-ness and famine staring him in the face, exposed to the taunts and insults of those whom he had once supported, he was recognized by an old friend, who gave him ten guineas to purchase necessaries. He expended five in procuring decent apparel; with the remaining five he repaired to a common gambling house and increased them to 50. He than adjourned to one of the higher order of houses, sat down with former associates, and won £20,000. Returning the next night he lost all, was once more penuless, and after subsisting former associates, and won £20,000. Returning the next night he lost all, was once more penniless, and after subsisting many years in abject poverty, died a beggar in St. Giles. , sales MAKING AN EXCEPTION.

A Zancsville man, being "flat broke," and wanting to go to Columbus, concluded to "brass it," and accordingly took a car thus descrices the trip:

Jones, had reached our deadhead friend, in his round of collecting tickets and fares. " Your ticket, if you please," said the "Columbus," replied the deadhead.

"$2.10," said Jones.
"Haven't nary a stamp," remarked our deadhead acquaintance. "You must pay your fare or get off the train," said the conductor.

" Stop her," quietly remarked the dead-

The train was stopped, and he was left on the side of the road, to wait, as he said, the next train, on which he succeeded in ending by deadhead telling the conductor "to stop her," and he being again left on the side of the road. Train after train was boarded, and each put him off a little nearer Columbus. The last train on which he got was that of our friend Jones, who was on his return trip from Bellaire to Columbus. Deadhead got on his train at before he was discovered by Jones. "Going to Columbus again, I suppose?" romarked Jones. "Haven't been there yet," said dead-

"I can't get a ride more than six miles before they put me off. I don't think I'll get on more then one or two more trains after your'n before Columbus will be the putting off place. "Well, do you think we can carry you unless you pay your fare ?" inquired Jones. "Stop her," quietly remarked dead-

"Well, I do think," said Jones, "of all the brassy individuals I ever met you are ahead of them all. I'll take you for your infernal impudence and nothing eise;" and deadhead was carried into Columbus on the same train he started on there days

On the following Monday he reappeared at the regular hour. 'Well, Monsieur,' demanded his superior, 'why have you stayed away all the week?' You, sir,' replied the clerk, 'gave me permission.' '11' cried the chief; '1 I am thy Redeemer, for thee I must die, permission.' 11' cried the chief; 'l gave you leave forty-eight hours only, and not for six days!' 'I beg your pardon, sir,' answered the young man, 'I have only taken the exact time which you granted me. We work here eight hours a day, but six times eight are forty-eight. I certainly had no occasion to ask your permission for the night, any more than for the hours which I do not owe to the administration.' This was logical, but since that day the chief specifies by administrative hours the duration of the leave he grants.

He answer'd twas JESUS, from heaven I came. I am thy Redeemer, for thee I must die, The cup the most painful I cannot pass by, Thy sins like a mountain are laid upon me, And all this deep anguish I suffer for thee. I trembled with horror, and loudly did cry, Lord save a poor sinner, oh save or I die; He smil'd when he saw me, and said to me, live, Thy sins which are many I'll freely forgive. How sweet was the moment, he bade me rejoice, the smil'd, oh how pleasant, how cheering his voice; I fied from the garden to shed it abroad, I shouted salvation, and glory to God.

CHRIST IN THE GARDEN.

While nature was sinking in stillness to rest, The last beams of daylight shone clear in the west, Over fields by the moonlight in lonely retreat, In deep meditation I wandered my feet.

While passing the garden I chanced to hear, A voice faint and fluttering from one that was there: The voice of the mourner affected my heart, While pleading in anguish the poor sinners part.

In offering to heaven his pitying prayer, He spake of the torments that sinners must bear, His life as a ransom he offered to give, That sinners redeemed in glory might live.
