THE PROVINCIAL INSURANCE COMPANY Now Issues A SPECIAL FORM OF POLICY For three years, at three-quarters per cent, which has the following peculiar features. ITS POLICY IS INDISPUTABLE Against everything except Fraud, over Insurance, additional Insurance, change of interest, and increase of hazard. It is PAYABLE FORTHWITH Upon adjustment by the Company's Inspector. This is the only policy which does not reserve a certain time in which to pay the loss. The Company has not joined the combination to raise the rates. Its RATES ARE LOWER On many kinds of property than those of other offices. CORNELL & MAGUIRE.

A CORRECTION. It being falsely alleged by an advertiser in the "Post," that the Isolated Risk Insurance Company received in 1872 several thousand dollars more premium than THE AGRICULTURAL We give the statement a most emphatic contradiction. In proof we quote from the statements made under oath by the officers of the respective companies:

	Prem. received in 1872.	Assets.
Agricultural Mutual	$87,101	$225,000.
Isolated Risk	59,121	83,575.

FARMERS WILL NOTE the following points:

1. THE AGRICULTURAL charges only 75 cents per $100 for a three year old policy, and gives a more favourable policy than any Stock Co.
2. THE AGRICULTURAL pays for "Live Stock" killed in the fields by lightning. The Isolated Risk does not.
3. THE AGRICULTURAL policy defines "Ordinary Contents." The Isolated Risk does not, thus leaving room for dispute as to what articles are insured in the event of a fire.
4. The Isolated Risk does not agree to pay its losses "at once." It reserves 60 days. See its policy.

We respectfully ask FARMERS TO Give These Points A CAREFUL INVESTIGATION And not be led away by misrepresentations. CORNELL & MAGUIRE. Lindsay, July 9th 1873. Agents.

THE LITTLE HATCHET.

"Dear! dear! who broke my favorite egg?" Cried Biddy Pantam to her daughter; "Some lazy cur, too proud to beg, Has mashed it—and his back's ought ter." The child gave one pathetic crow, Her fearful tears began to thicken; She sobbed aloud "I did it, ma— This little person is my chicken, Some albumen and lime I'll buy, And make another one to match it; Oh, ma! I cannot tell a lie, I did it with my little hatchet."

THREE KISSES OF FAREWELL.

Three, only three, my darling, Separate, solemn, slow; Not like the swift and joyous ones We used to know, When we kissed because we loved each other Simply to taste love's sweet, And hey-hoed our kisses as the summer Lavishes heat— But as they kiss whose hearts are wrung, When hope and fear are spent, A sacrament.

First of the three, my darling, Is sacred unto pain; We have hurt each other often; We shall again, When we pine because we miss each other, And do not understand How the written are so much colder Than eye and hand. I kiss thee, dear, for all such pain Which we may give or take; Buried, forgiven before it came, For our love's sake.

The second kiss, my darling, Is full of joy's sweet thrill; We have blessed each other always; We always will. We shall reach until we find each other; Fast all of time and space; We shall listen till we hear each other In every pace; The earth is full of messengers, Which love sends to and fro; I kiss thee, darling, for all joy Which we shall know.

The last kiss, oh, my darling, My love—I cannot see Through my tears, as I remember What it may be. We may die and never see each other, Die with no time to give Any sign that our hearts are faithful To dress to live. Token of what they will not see Who see our parting breath, This one last kiss, my darling, seals The seal of death!

ODDS AND ENDS.

A matter-of-fact old gentleman thinks it must be a very small base ball that can be caught on a fly.

A Georgia paper promises to publish a "thrilling creeal." Its readers will probably make an oat of it.

Question for naval examination.—Q. Can you give any other name for a ship's cut-water? A. Yes, A sea-saw.

A pugilistic Irishman in England, being bound over to keep the peace on all British subjects, remarked: "The saints help the first forsiner I meet."

A Pennsylvania wife has been cutting off her husband's ears because he was insolent. But, as one of our exchanges remarked a few days since, "Man wants but little ear below."

Maddening.—Husband: "If, as I said before, Matilda, you still cherish that feeling of affection for me which you once professed, my wish would be law to you. I repeat it, Matilda—Law!" Matilda; "Lor!"

A French gentleman, learning English to some purpose, replied thus to the salutations, "How do you do, monsieur?" "Do vat?" How do you find yourself? "I never looses myself." "How do you feel?" "Smooth. You just feel me."

A genuis was describing the utility of an India rubber ship which he was inventing when an old salt exclaimed: "No, no; it will never do; an India rubber ship would rub out all the lines of latitude and longitude, to say nothing of the equator."

A literal-minded youngster was picked up by a visitor of the family, who, dandling him on his knee, said: "I wish I had this little boy; I think there's money in him." "I know there is, for I swallowed a cent when I was at grandma's the other day."

An old lady hearing that a young friend had lost his place on account of a misdemeanor, exclaimed "Miss Dem eanor! Lost his place on account of Miss Demeanor! Well, well, I'm afeard it's too true, that there's all'us a woman at the bottom of man's difficulties."

A friend at our elbow says he thinks it just as reprehensible for women to get tight by lacing as for men to get tight by whiskey. Both injure the system. Well, it's none of your particular business any way. Men generally get tight because its pleasant, and woman get tight corsets nice.

Thirty-seven years ago Sir Robert Peel presented a farmer's club with two iron ploughs of the best construction On his next visit the old ploughs were again at work. "We tried the iron, Sir Robert," said a member of this enlightened society, "but we all be of one mind, that they made the weeds grow."

A gentleman riding on horseback came upon an Irishman who was fencing in a most barren and desolate piece of land "What are you fencing in that lot for, Pat?" he asked. "A herd of cattle would starve to death on that land." "And sure, yer honor," replied Pat' "wasn't I fencin'it to kape the poor bastes out av it?"

A man went into a butcher's shop, and, finding the wife in attendance, in the absence of her husband, thought he would have a joke at her expense, and said: "Madam, can you supply me with a yard of pork?" "Yes Sir," said she. And then turning to a boy, she added: "James, give that gentleman three pig's feet."

A young man who was married in Delaware six months ago has joined in the discussion of the question of family economy, but his little contribution is far from satisfactory. "I do not," he says, "understand how it is I used to figure it out, as I sat with my arm around her waist on Sunday nights, and all it would then cost to live would be $2.75 a week, and now I spend $13 and am hungry half the time.

"While journeying by rail," says a traveller, "I witnessed the following incident: One night, just after I had scrambled into my sleeping berth, I heard loud and angry voices proceeding from the rear of the car. "I tell you this is a sleeping-car, and you can't come in without a ticket," "Begorra, I had a ticket." "There is it? I've lost it." "If you really had the misfortune to lose your ticket, perhaps you can remember your berth" The e was an interval of silence, Paddy evidently employing his thinking powers. "Och, be Jabers!" he exclaimed at length, 'I was born on the 26th day of October, 1826.'"

In a village near Airdrie, a ludicrous incident occurred lately at an evening sermon meeting. The leader of p almody, a somewhat raw individual, made a stumble, and finally came to a dead stand in the singing of a tune. After three more unsuccessful attempts he cried out in his agony, "This is most tremendous wark!" The risibilities of the audience being excited by this remark, the troubled "son of song" turned to the minister and said apologetically, "That aint the gang aya!" He resolved, however, to try again; but before he had found the right key-note, a gentleman in the audience had struck up "St. Paul's," and it was joined in by the congregation. At the second line, however, the discomfited precentor bawled out, "Hand on a wee! I've gotten't noo." The congregation, although they did not "haud on," had, as well may be imagined, to "haud" their sides to prevent them splitting with laughter.

Erasmus Wilson says the "prolongation of life is possible four different ways: 1st by increasing the vital power itself; 2nd, by hardening the organs; 3rd, by retarding vital consumption; 4th, By facilitating and assisting restoration." It is now established beyond all doubt that Fellows' Syrup of Hypophosphites will retard vital consumption, increase involuntary muscular power, and thereby harden the organs, increase vitality and facilitate and assist restoration, and consequently it possesses the wonderful property of PROLONGING HUMAN LIFE.

THE EFFICACY OF Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers in curing Coughs, Colds, and all Bronchial affections, and cheering the afflicted, has passed into a proverb. In the United States, where these marvellous Wafers are known, they bear down all opposition and eclipse all rivalry; the demand for them hesitatingly increased for the last twenty years, until now the sales average over one hundred thousand boxes a year. Eminent members of the medical profession without number admit that they knew of no preparation producing such beneficial results as these wafers. When taken in season they effect a permanent cure. Sold by all Druggists and country dealers at 25 cents per box.

AS NUMEROUS cases of poisoning have occurred from the use of Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites, containing Strychnine, and to the public without being properly labelled, purchasers of Dr. Wheeler's Compound Elixir of Phosphates and Calisaya are requested not to confound the two preparations, as they are entirely different, both chemically and medicinally. PHOSPHATES are necessary elements of the human organism, and essential to the preservation of life, entering into the composition of every solid and fluid of the body, and are as necessary as our ordinary food. As Strychnine is frequently poisonous in the smallest doses, it is of the greatest importance that this caution be heeded. M.

"So live that when the summons comes to join The innumerable caravan which moves To that mysterious realm, where each shall take His chamber in the silent halls of death, Thou go not, like the quarry slave at night, Scourged to his dungeon; but sustained and soothed By an unfaltering trust, approach thy grave, Like one that draws the drapery of his couch About him, and lies down to pleasant dreams."

Silently they place the coffin within the vault. One by one the Brethren cast their sprigs of evergreen upon it; the last sad "Farewell, dear Brother," is heard; and the voice of the young minister utters the final dirge of "Earth to earth, dust to dust, ashes to ashes," and the door of the vault is closed; the Brethren return to their homes to meet no more with the departed till the grave shall give up its dead.

Upon a small porch in front of a neat white cottage, in Pennsylvania, sit an aged pair. A shade of sadness is resting upon their features, for they are thinking of their youngest born—their absent Benjamin.

"Nathan," says the mother, "I fear some evil has befallen our erring boy, for when last we heard of him he had engaged in that Cuban expedition, as it is called."

"Verily, wife, I have my misgivings, also; for he joined that secret society called Odd Fellows, contrary to our desires, and I fear it has led him into mischief, for it is the 'unfruitful work of darkness.' May God forgive him for the wrong he has done."

"True, but we must not judge him harshly. He has gone in the way of sinners that have enticed him, and it may be that he will never return, and if he does not my poor heart will be filled with sorrow, for thou knowest that of late years he would not yield to our advice."

"I fear God's punishment will rest upon the wayward one, for he has grievously sinned."

"Oh, say not so, Nathan," sighs the fond mother, as the bright teardrop dims her aged eyes, "for he is our youngest, our loved, and I fear, spoilt child. We doted on him. He was the joy of our aged hearts; his brothers and his sisters idolized him, and shall we not suffer if he commits wrong? Rather let us forget his faults and his foibles, and pray that he may be returned to us."

"But who is that?" inquired the old man, pointing to one approaching from the village. "Ah, it is John, the weaver, and I doubt he brings us a letter."

It is, as the old man suspects, John with a letter. The aged couple rise, and with eager hands reach for the epistle. The father puts on his glasses.

"It is not our Benjamin's hand," he says as he looks at it, "it's a stranger's, But what means these curious letters 'I. O. O. F.'? Oh, they are the cabalistic letters of that wicked society. Why should they send a letter to me?"

"Open it—it may speak of our boy," adds the mother, as she gazes upon the initials of the unholy society.

The father opens the letter, and reads—
