Whalley was called up in behalf of Mr. Whalley was called up in behalf of Mr. Cottingham and in an appropriate speech thanked that gentleman's friends for their efforts to secure his return. At length Mr. Wood came in and received a perfect ovation.

Mr. Wood, after the cheering had subsided, in a brief but eloquent address that was frequently interrupted with enthusiastic cheering, thanked the electors for the honour they had conferred upon him, and for the mann er in which they had worked for him. He had been much more careful in ascertaining who were working for him than who were going to vote for him. (Cheers.) were going to vote for him. (Cheers.) He referred to the efforts of his friends in Verulam, (cheers); in north and south Emily, (cheers); and in Ops, (cheers); and asked them to consider carefully the vote of N. Emily and Ope;to Ponder upon the vote as he had pondered upon it, and to think about that vote as he thou ght about it, and to remember that no matter how popular he might or might not be, he wanted them to understand that without that vote he could not have been elected. He t hen referred to the township of Mar iposa; and expressed himself as while living in the county town, and having no great pro perty and having to him he should have rece ived such a large majority in the town. (Cheers.) He was aware that a good many Conservatives in the town of Lindsay-but very few in the townships--had voted Whether Conservatives had now sup-

Four years ago he had in supporting Sandfield Macdonald given umbrage to he had done so much for the county, it was the strongest indication that could be given of personal friendship or appreciation of what he had done for the county. (Cheers.) Mr. Hudspeth had stated at Omemee, and he understood also in the town hall here, that there were to be no more "compromises." About a year ago understanding that Mr. Hudspeth had strongly condemned the Pacific Scandal and had expressed his willingness to give a fair present his willingness to give a fair trial to the present administra-tion, he (Mr. Wood) had been one tion, he (Mr. Wood) had been one who was willing to support Mr. Hudspeth as a candidate for the House of Commons. One short year had rolled around; and when he (Mr. W.) was applied to the mublic Mr. Hudspeth and pealing to the public, Mr. Hudspeth and ether leading Conservatives of the county had taken the ground that there was to be no more compromise; they had pro-posed to out the bridge away; but be-fore the bridge had been cut away, we had got the scattered remnants of the Reform party together, we had got our friends on this side the river, and like the old Roman Consul, we said, "let the bridge go down." (Cheers.) He proposed to give them a short history of the compromises that had taken place since 1867. That was the time of Confederation; and he was one with many who held the view that the strong party prejudices of the past should if possible be done away with; and that there was a good opportunity, especially as far as the Local House was concerned as far as the Local House was concerned, to do away with those animosities. (Cheers.) In accordance with this view he amongst others had become a party to an understanding by which the Conservatives were to have a member for the Local House, and Reformers a member for the Commons. So far as the Reform party were concerned they had faithfully carried out that compact; (cheers), but every person present knew the manner in which the other party had carried out the compact. Mr. Hudspeth was a personal friend of his, and he had no objection to the manner in which Mr. Hudspeth had conducted himself in this contest, as he understood he had said nothing personal about him (Mr. W.) Mr. Hudspeth was the rising hope of the Conservative party and the walls of the town had been placarded with bills calling a mass-meeting of friends of the Oppohad been placarded with bills calling a mass-meeting of friends of the Opposition for the purpose of hearing Mr. Hudspeth. He (Mr. W.) would like to call the attention of his friends to that meeting. On Friday night he had attended a meeting in the south western part of Ops; had given his opponents all the time they asked, and had sat for three mortal hours listening to their attacks upon the Government, and their personal attacks upon himself; yet the same night the chairman of the Consertive meeting in Lindsay had amounced that any friend of Mr. Wood could have twenty minutes to reply!
