Roland was in a state of inward commotion. He thought himself the sun. The confinement in the office, with the additional work he had to get. These are the banks which freely lens when times through there, was the chief grievance; and a grievance it really was to one of Roland's temperament. When he had Arthur Channing and Jenkins To pay the Ranks which freely lent wher for his companions in it, to whom he could talk as he pleased, and who did all the work, allowing Roland to do all the play, it had been tolerably bear-like play, it had been tolerably bear-like play.

These are the Travellers who went through to land, and could bear it no longer.

Another thing that Roland would perhaps be allowed to bear no longer immunity from his debts. They had grown on him latterly, as much as the work had. Careless Roland saw no way out of that difficulty, any more than be did out of the other, save by an emigration to that desired haven which had stereotyped itself on the retina of his imagination in colors of the brightest tantasy. Port Natal. For all the research perhaps and he to be so.

"Look here," said he to himans."

These are the Travellers who went through to land, and sold the goods to the Country Dealers, who then found it hard to pay the Importers, who there found it hard to pay the Importers, and held their wheat, and would not self, and would not pay the Country dealers; and held their wheat and would not self, and would not pay the Country dealers, and held their wheat and would not self, and would not pay the Country dealers. Who then found it hard to pay the Bankers, and held their wheat and would not self, and would not pay the Country dealers, and held there wheat and would not self, and would not pay the Country dealers. Well," concluded Roland, rising. now gracefully enjoying a little repose before the fire; his head on the back of my lady's low embroidered chair, and his feet extended on either hob. "What's for supper ?" asked Roland turning his eyes on the cloth, which bore traces that a party, and not a scrugalously tidy one, had already partaken of that meal.

"Bones," said Gerald.

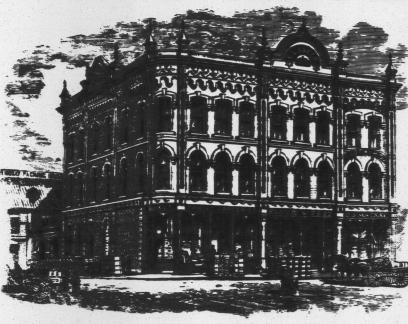

"Bones !" echoed Roland. "Bones," rejoined Gerald. "They made a show of broiling some, downstairs, but they took good care to cut off the meat first. Where all the meat goes to, in this house, I can't think. If a good half of the leg of mutton A keen wind, blowing from the east, didn't go down from dinner to-day, possessed no eyes." "They are not going to put me off with bones," said Roland, ringing the bell. "When a man's worked within an ace of his life, he must eat. Martha"—when the maid appeared—"I want some supper."

TO BE CONTINUED. HOW CAME THE CRISIS.

In their spring trade review and circular, John Macdonald & Ca., dry goods merchants, Toronto, point out the causes of the recent "financial stringency" and among other things, say: "Farmers became unwilling to sell their wheat in a falling market, and because they saw fit to hold it, preferred in many cases (for the time being at least) to make the country storekeepers their bankers." They consider that if the lessons of the "pressure" are carefully studied it will do good; and in answer to the question "How came the price" say.
