PROBABLE LENOTH OF SESSION, On the other hand there are a few natters which demand more extended Mr. Metannan as a better man for the discussion this year than caused last seasion, chief among them being the favourably known that we need not ad-weente his cause. He can be triusted all taxation. The jurisdiction of the Local questioned, but only with reference to For Deputy Heeves there will also be some of the exemptions claimed. It is a keen contest. We feel bound to give quite competent for the Assembly to our erst-while opponent, Mr. Cooper, deal with church property and also a frateful belief, as one worthly deserving the honour. We do this also with all other properties and salaries from certain selfish reasons, for after twenty years of editoriel ton it will be our ambition to seek relaxation from the content of th twenty years of editorial toli it will be our ambitton to seek relevation from the cares of the sanctum in the gaities of the Council Chamber and become a candidate for municipal homours. Mr. Winters will, however, make a good Deputy Reeve. In the contest between Mr. Pro and Mr. Diament the point sought to be made against the latter that he is in the employ of another and cannot command his time should have no weight, for Mr. C. i. In point of experience Mr. McLeman has a decided advantage. A councillor sevent time; he was in the year 1807 and again in 1808, elected Deputy-Reeve. In 1807 and again, elected by J. B. During the years Mr. McLeenan was a member of the Council, he was neede for his constant and purcuis attendance to his citation constant and purcuis attendance to his citation for his honest and independent decision on all matters coming before him and for excellent business ability well displayed in the assistance he rendered in the management of town and county finance. Mr Russell has, on the contrary, chiefly distinguished himself by his "assumed ability and bungling incapacity" (to quote a local worthy), while his completions and shament absence from his post on two or three most important occasions has been the subject of some remarks even among his friende. In connection with the Court House repairs in 1874, he has left a record of job-hery which will be imperishable while solder at a high price slicks to the at a higher one; and though contractors may thank him for the introduction of the beautiful system by which a man can oversee his own work and charge an extravagent price for his services in hoth capacities, yet he rate-payers will observe that their pecuniary interest demands as well the abolition of the system and the rejection of a man who supports it.

Allowing, however, the questions of experience, honesty in municipal expenditure, independence and reputation to be answered in Mr. McLeman's through Mr. Russell's riginal well tell you that "he has great influence in the County Council," and "has a youd head for figures." In the first place I would ask what has been the outcome of the 'the sugest influence in the County in these last two verse that we did not get before? Sohe answers, in the next place let us look at the facts about these figures. Your paper of the 7th September last contained a communication on the Town Pinances in which gaves charges of incompetency and blue leving verse made against the Finance Committee, including Mr. Russell'short Chairman.
