"Mr Snell does not appear to dread the effect of keeping sheep in large flocks, but thinks, as the other witnesses do, that they will do betted in small lots than which kept in large flots. His system of freeding is as follows: In the winter time we keep the sheep in open sheds, with those that can be closed in case of atomic weather so that they can true in and off of the varies at pleasure. We lead them in racks in the house, principally on clover hay. We feed a good deal of pea straw to our breeding even; to the young sheep we feed clover hay and roots. I think from the experience I have had that to feed cones to even with lambs is intributed to the lambs. It makes the lambs weak. Old country shepherds say that when they have a his even of famils.
