A heartless case of seduction has come to light at Brighton. A young girl, only 16 years of age, has been seduced and ruined by a married school teacher, who drove a good and affectionate wife from him norder to be able the more successfully to accomplish his flendish designs upon his innocent and confiding victim. On Westnesstay night of last week the deluded girl succeeded in escaping from her bedroom by the window, and arrived at Brighton to take the express in order to join her abductor at Colborne. The train being some hours late enabled her cant and aged mother to overtake the recreant child. She was at first firm in her determination to join the villain in whom she had confided, but at the sight of her mother's gray hair and grief-stricken face she relemted and returned to her home. The eeks ago Dr. G., a very reputable and idely-known physician, living on C reet, was called to attend a very complicatcase of rheumatism. Upon arriving at e house he found a man about forty years age, lying in a prostrated and serious con-tion, and his whole frame dangerously afcted with the painful discuse. He preribed for the patient, but the man continu-to grow worse, and on Sunday evening he as found to be in a very alarming condion. The knees and elbows and larger joints ere greatly inflamed and could not be oved. It was only with extreme difficulty at the patient could be turned in bed, with the clothing was so oppressive that means d to be adopted to keep it from the pati-it's body. The doctor saw that his assist-ce would be of no avail and left the bouse e members of the family following him to e door, weeping. At this critical hour, a sighbour, a poor and humble German shoe aker, appeared to the grief smitten once as saviour. He had heard of the despair of the mily, and now asked them to try his remly, and accordingly brought forth a bottle
