 LINDSAY, FRIDAY, MARCH 9, 1883.
LIGHT AND SHADE.
 A CLONE CASE.
 A woman who had been married for some time, and who was well known in the neighborhood, was found to have a child which was a clone of her husband's. The child was born at the same time as the husband's, and was found to have the same features and characteristics as the husband's. The woman was found to have been unfaithful to her husband, and the child was found to be the result of her infidelity. The case was brought to court, and the woman was found guilty of the crime of adultery. The child was found to be the property of the husband, and the woman was ordered to pay for the child's maintenance.

Why I Stopped Drinking Whiskey.
 "I may be new to you," said Burdette, the man who was a reporter the other day, "but I have become a total abstainer. I advised the doctor to figure and found that each man is allotted one barrel of whiskey and by close calculation, I discovered I had drunk a barrel and half. I do not know, but I had drunk my share and half of some other man's barrel, and am too lame to rob anybody, especially of the whiskey we get nowadays, and therefore have put drinking whiskey entirely up."

Don't Losen a Trade.
 "No, don't lose a trade, young man, on a night and your hands will your shirt collar and your complexion sweating. I have seen you over a counter, and I have seen you to the ladies; put your hand in the middle; make an eye of yourself generally and work for ages that wouldn't support a Chinese juggler on rice and rats, and leave big tough balances to pay your wash women, and because it is a little more genteel in the eyes of the people whose pride prevents them from pounding rock or heaving lead, and whose poverty pinches every man, and whose patent recognized obstinacy, if the truth was only told."

No Luck with the Chickens.
 "What luck did you have last night," asked Amos, lab Bledsoe of Whangdoolee water, two of the most popular colored men in Austin, or that section of Texas, as to that matter?
 "Didn't have a look at all. Dar was no chickens in coach. I found a lot of shirts again on a line, but the waddler was so abundant that he shied and hidder close to the line as to line as light I could get all on 'em. Maybe he had not tempo and to do chorn lamb, and moderate waddler so I kin pull dem close offen line of day an still don't get light."
 "Why didn't you cut der line at both ends, and go wid de line, close and all?"
 "Bender Whangdoolee, now time I'll be ready to hab yer so along. You has had to do about line upon line and perter upon perter."

Black Jerseys seem to have become suddenly fashionable since Lent began. It is a garment that can cover a multitude of old waists.
 —New blouse waists of allied Parisian make have very long points at back and front. They have the appearance of style long drawn out.
 —It is fashionable now to introduce some element of the antique into every mode of dress, and we can be historical in our gowns if not in our minds.
 —New hats for feminine heads are trimmed with military looking pompons, aigrettes and short, fancy-looking ostrich tips that nod at you continually.
 —A new lace, the Helvetian, has a recessed heavy square mesh, Spanish lace designs for the borders, with patches of Brussels ground, on which are duchesse flowers.
 —Something new in lace pink is a tiny snapping turtle having every appearance of being real. It is made of tortoise shell, and the eyes of the new pet are of emeralds.
 —Old-fashioned Holland clocks warranted more or less than a hundred years old, are now made to order at short notice, and no parvenu's house should be without one.
 —Black silk costumes sent over here as models for a time and then sold, have the entire front of the skirt (one solitary mass) of jet. The effect is certainly brilliant, if not startling.
 —Hammered silver buttons are used on gray, pale blue, and rose-colored costumes, bronze buttons on olive, green and brown suits, and old gold on tan, brick and terra cotta dresses.
 —Spring gowns include ponzes on which are worked large figures of flowers and fruit. Some of the fruit is not to be found in nature, and the flowers are a kind unknown to florists.
 —A novelty in new household goods is a sham pillow of stiff pasteboard, concave underneath for the real pillow to remain in, while the sham of lace or embroidered or ruffled muslin is placed on the upper side of the sham pillow, which is covered with pink, blue, or red selcecia or silk. These sham pillows greatly facilitate the work of dressing the bed in the morning and undressing it at night.

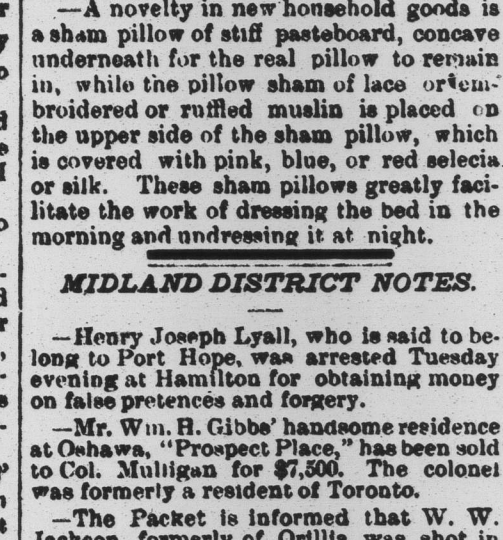

MIDLAND DISTRICT NOTES.
 —Henry Joseph Loyal, who is said to belong to Fort Hope, was arrested Tuesday evening at Hamilton for obtaining money on false pretences and forgery.
 —Mr. Wm. H. Gibbs' handsome residence at Oshawa, "Prospect Place," has been sold to Col. Mulligan of the army. The Colonel was formerly a resident of Toronto.
 —The Packet is informed that W. W. Jackson, formerly of Orillia, was shot in the neck by a business partner at Chicago the other day. The man, who is a pleasant little diversity in Chicago.
 —A large wheel in Miller's paper mill, near Trenton, fell on a millwright named John Drury on Thursday of last week, dislocating his shoulder, and otherwise injuring him.
 —A serious stabbing occurred on the night of the election at Verona, in Addison, over an election dispute. The victim, a man named McCullough, is not expected to live, and his assailant, a man named Michael Kinnon has been arrested.
 —Ontario can boast of having sent the tallest man to the present house of commons in the person of James Armstrong, of Westminster, the member for South Middlesex, who stands 6 feet 5 inches high. There come three Nova Scotians, Messrs. Kirk, Ray and Dodd, each 6 feet 3 inches.
 —The Joseph Hall Co. of Oshawa sold a carload of Champion mowers a couple of weeks ago to be shipped to Fort Calgary in the north-west territory, some four hundred miles west of Regina. The same party purchased a carload of horse hay rakes from Mr. Mason.
 —The new Presbyterian church in Barrie was opened on Sunday by the Rev. Principal Grant of Kingston. The collection amounted to over $1,200, which, with the proceeds of the Monday evening meeting, made the entire amount about $1,400. The Packet wants to know if any congregation can beat that!

How He Shot the Dog.
 "You are charged, Uncle Primus, with firing off a gun and killing Mr. Brown's large Newfoundland dog. Are you guilty or not?"
 "The old man looked up over his spectacles, turned partly around to the large audience and said in a very effective way: 'I am not.'
 "Well, then," continued the court, "let's hear what you have to say for yourself."
 "His 'judie way, yer honah, I b'long to er kullered military comp'y hyes in dis town an' on las' Saturday night I went to drill at de armury, an' when I started home, jis as I wur gwine pass Mister Brown's house his big ole dog jumped on me, an' jis ter shoot de bunte. I looked my rifle, wid de 'tenshon ten map der trigger, thinkin' dat would drabe him. But lo! bless your soul; drabe some mischevous nigger stuck a 'cort-ridge' in datar gun up at do armury on-beknowing ter me, an' de consequence was, de dog got shot."
 "Then, of course, your plan is that you shot the dog in self-defence."
 "No, sir; yer honah, I never loud dat I shot the dog in self-defence."
 "Then what did you say?"
 "I said I shot him through de side wen he run through de fence."
 "Uncle Primus was not fined."

Knight's Asthma Cure.
 W. Beaumont, managing editor of the La Patrie, writes:
 MONTREAL, FEB. 10th, 1883.
 DEAR SIR, —I have been a sufferer from Asthma for the last seven years, and of good no sensation in saying that your Asthma Cure has done more to relieve me than any other remedy which I have ever tried, although I used to France to place myself in the care of the most eminent French physicians. I am not ready to say that I am entirely cured, but I can affirm that your remedy has done a great deal of good, and that I have reason to hope that it will eventually rid me of that awful sickness.
 H. HAVRONAN, Managing Editor La Patrie.
 Knight's Asthma Cure is for sale by E. Gregory, Lindsay, Ont., and druggists generally; also by L. A. Knight, 372 Notre Dame St., Montreal. Pamphlet and full information on application.—25-cw.
