Mrs. Mayhew was never happier than when she was managing other people's business, for which she had a singular business, for which she had a singular point. No sooner thought than done. She was gliding quietly toward the door, when

When she came down in her walking things—close fitting velvet paletot, trimmed with superb sable, and cap to match—she found him waiting in the hall. Having ceremoniously opened the door for her, they set out, and walked on rapidly, exchanging the vertest commonplaces. The pier was evidently to be the scene of action so Alice braced up all her nerve for the encounter, and firmly determined to abide by Miss Fanc's advice and not yield an inch till the certificate was utterly refuted.

No one meeting them would have guessed at the storm that was raging in their hearts. They did not look like married people, nor lovers certainly. "A young fellow taking his very pretty sister for a walk, most likely," would have been the verdict of a pa-ser-by.

Acrived at the pier, Ailce summoned up all her courage, and taking a good long reath and a firm grasp of her umbrella, said, with apparent composure: "Now, what have you to say to me?" "Several things as your husband, and a

I have made two—once in Looton and once now but this, I declare to you solemnly, will be the last. Come back to me, and trust me, my dearest," he said, laying his hand entreatingly on her arm. he said:

"That was your last word, now hear mine. I most solemnly take God to witness raising his hat as he spoke—that I will never receive you back as my wife until you have made the most humble and abject apology that ever came from woman's tips. You shall abase yourself to the very dust for the shameful injustice you have done me."

"Shall I, indeed?" she exclaimed passionately. "You will never see a Saville abased to the dust. I will never apologize and never beg your pardon. Pray do not offer your forgiveness before it is required."

Should you marry again, as no doubt you will, I hope sin-

WE HOLD THE WINNING CARDS!

Determined always to keep ahead in the clothing trade we have had our selections of spring and summer tweeds and suitings ship. ped to us so that we can announce the "first of the season.

We have just thrown ourselves to be in a position to give "the boys" or "the men" nobby stylish suits, and we want every one to buy from us where you will get a good show for your money.

Reliable cloths are the foundation; next come graceful shapes and a good fit; without which there is neither comfort nor pleasure in the wearing; then durability and lastly the price. We guarantee entire satisfaction in all these particulars.

Our new cutter, Mr. Wm. McKay, late of Woodstock, comes to us most highly recommended and with a first class reputation as a cutter of stylish garments, and we implicitly rely on his abilities to give our customers every satisfaction.

NEW HATS! NEW HATS!

We have just got in our spring styles of hats. Hard hats hat for hard heads. Soft hats—hats for heads that might be called soft. Hats for young and old.

In fact we have Mr. Melville's usual good assortment, and under his especial supervision. New styles are out, as every one knows, and we are full of them.
