THE CANADIAN POST. LINDSAY, FRIDAY, OCT. 5, 1888.

THE VICTORY IN ALGOMA. Mr. Lyon, the liberal candidate, has been elected for Algoma by a majority of over 120.

THE GRAND TRUNK AND THE MIDLAND. An Ottawa despatch says: "The Grand Trunk railway company gives notice in the Canada Gazette of the semi-annual meeting of the shareholders."

THE LINDSAY STATION. An experienced and capable railway man states that the new station being built at Lindsay is not all suitable to the importance of the town and the large business done here.

EDITORIAL NOTES. Chief Justice Wilson has decided a vexed question by holding in a case against the Midland railway that a station master is an officer (not merely a servant) of the company.

The Montreal Transcript scolded when it says that Toronto had no right to the title of "Canada's great fair" for its recent exhibition, and that the name properly belongs to the Dominion exhibition at St. John.

The Toronto Globe says: "The Lawton Fair has adopted the cash in advance system, thereby setting a good example to many other weekly fairs."

In the choice style of the Mail it would seem that Mowat's "best pay" Harry was two much for John A's yaller dog John Shields in Algoma; while Pardo's stinger completely knocked out Norquay, the "infant" from Winnipeg.

The judges in the Welland case have found that two charges of corrupt practices are established, but are not clear that the parties are to be held as agents of Col. Morin, the liberal member. The judges are waiting to get the benefit of the decision in the West Simcoe appeal case.

Mr. Mouscadet has carried Jacques Cartier, but only by a small majority. Extensive bribery is charged and the case will be protested in the courts. It is supposed that Mr. Mouscadet will seek refuge on the bench, and that some more active politician will lead the conservatives in Lower Canada.

Hon. Isaac Buchanan died at Hamilton Monday morning at the age of seventy-three. He was for over half a century one of Hamilton's most prominent citizens, being a leading merchant, an active politician and a representative man.

The Mail editor broke out with the fury of despair when the conclusion was forced on him that John Shields had not carried Algoma. Here is a specimen brick:—"It may be said that whatever members of the government of paid or unpaid agents of the grip party went to Algoma, they were, on their arrival in the district, invariably found to be footpads and 'shoguns'."

The veteran Joe Medill of the Chicago Tribune, some years ago a strong protectionist, declared the other day before the senate labor committee at New York that they represent U.S. tariff "in fleeing farmers."

To indulge in a-kiss is sometimes a costly proceeding. It seems to be especially expensive for editors, though why is not explained. Mr. F. M. Thayer, for many years editor of the Evansville, Ind., Journal, postmaster of that city, a leading member of the Methodist church, and a gentleman advanced in years to the dignity of a grandfather, died a widow. It does not appear that he kissed her against her will, or behind a door, surreptitiously as it were, which is a very nice way of doing it, if she is a pretty widow.

The editor of the Mail has been spending a day at Newport to recover from the Algoma shock, and there happened an incident which is thus graphically described in Wednesday morning's issue and which will excite a good deal of sympathy for our talented confrere. The style of the narrative is that favoured by Laborers, Yaten and some other smart London editors:—"I'm decent absent minded, don't you know?—decent absent minded. Did something other morning, just like me, don't you know? Vast was knocked up, I thought the gas myself when I got up, decent steady, mostache mine I have to cut it out as it is—lighted gas to heat iron and forgot to put it out. Of course a fellow don't put on his morning clothes by daylight, and I got into my evening suit. By Jove! Opened the front door and stood in evening dress in broad daylight in Newport. Haven't got over it yet. (Gee!) I feel me entirely! Felt like a waiter or a foot. Deuced absent-minded, I am, don't you know? It was a fortunate thing for the best editor that one of Mowat's 'best pay' Harry was prowling along the street at that moment."

Gen. Luard's exceedingly brusque conduct at Cobourg camp has caused considerable heart feeling. The general, it seems, displayed brutal frankness in the criticisms of the volunteers, and the contrast with the tact that is generally and generously laid out is so great that the volunteers are almost ready to hang their heads in the first row of apple trees. A little candid criticism would be good for the volunteers, but Gen. Luard does not seem to be able to administer it judiciously. Hence the storm. The report that the general gave the lie direct to Col. Williams of Fort Hope at dinner is only too corroborated, and was it some nothing more than a somewhat warmly expressed difference of opinion between the two. The Tory Cobourg Sentinel-Gazette is informed that "an uncomplimentary allusion was made by Gen. Luard, with unnecessary emphasis, to the success of the volunteers of the Cobourg camp upon the morning of the 1st, and Col. Williams took up the case, and said that the volunteers were not to be compared to the regular troops of the army."
