"FORTUNE MY FOE"

"Am not too high, at times beyond thy reach. No, give the rich to reckless thought or speech. It is not better all his life to be Lord of himself, than all the world beside."

Thus, if high Fortune far away from thee take wing, Why shouldst thou envy counsel or king? Purple of innocence—wherefore make ado What can't you cover if the heart be true?

Then, if at last thou gather wealth at will; The more shall he praise thee, and the more shall hiss; Who he who he doth poverty endure, Should prove, when rich, best brother to the poor.
