As a teacher I always felt it my duty to labor faithfully and diligently for your interests, and besides I always considered it a pleasure and not a toil to do so. It is my carnest wish that in the future you will advance much more rapidly, and that the time is is not far distant when some of you will take your stand as prominent members in society. Under reexamination by Mr. Osier witness's memory again failed him as to the interview with Mr. Daniels; he could not recollect anything but a little conversation with Daniels as to his personal feeling towards Fell; they wished to get him as a conservative to support Mr. Fell; Daniels said he might vote for Fell but would not work for him.

Mr. John Fill, the respondent, was examined. He gave evidence as to the party organization in the riding. He declared that he did not know that Anderson and other outside parties were in the riding until after the contest, when he heard about it as a matter of general report. The court rose at 1.30 for lunch and resumed at 2 p m.

During the afternoon Charles Austin of Hallburton testified that he was sent for to go to McKelvey's hotel, and met there four or five nerties, including a man they called "Squirrel-Skin," who gave him scritineers papers to deliver and slao 530 to pay him for his trouble. A few days before he received $20 from Bennett or Hensult for driving him round canvassing two days. Out of this $20 he gave one Elliott, a voter, $5 for canvassing. He could not account for what became of $32 of the money, except that it was spent in treating in promoting the election. He gave one of his son $31 for a buffilo rohe which he used to drive sixteen miles. He had neither horse, briggy, nor harness. The witness with much hesitation admitted that Roht, McKelvey also gave him $5,00 to promote the election; and that on election day whiskey was very free in black bottles in McKelvey's hotel.

The remainder of the report is held over. The case will proceed to-day.
