sties of Rev. D. McTavish, the nister of St. Andrew's church, sy, and his induction to the charge slace in the church last Tuesday afternoon. There was a a very large attend suce of members of the congregation and others and the services were very impres

The presbytery of Lindsay met in the church at 11 o'clock a.m., and was constituted by the Rev. A. Rees, M. A., moder-stor pro. tem. Mr. Daviet McTavish, the relect, delivered his discourses and was duly examined in Greek, Hebrew, systematic theology and church history. The presbytery was highly satisfied with the trials and on taking a conjunct view of these sustained them and agreed to ordain Mr. McTavish and adjourned to a quarter past two. At that hour in Mr. Watson's house the presbytery met and was constituted by Rev. W. Lochead. The Watson's house the presbytery met and was constituted by Rev. W. Lochead. The edict having been served and no objections made the presbytery proceeded to the church, where Rev. D. B. McDonald presched, Rev. Mr. Lochead ordained and inducted Mr. McTavish in the usual form, Rev. Mr. Ross addressed the pastor, and Rev. Mr. Patterson the people. We give a synopsic of the addresses.

Rev. D. B. McDonald, of Scott and Uxbridge, operad the services by reading from the sixth chapter of the epistle to the Ephesiaus, followed by prayer. After singing from the sixty-second Pasim he again read from the services, takink his text from the second epistle of Paul to the Thessaloniaus, 3rd chapter, 1st verse: "Finally, brethren, pray for us, that the word of the Lord may have free course, and be glorified, even as it is with you," giving a clear and impressive sermon. He said this epistle was written by impiration and was intended not only for the Thessaloniaus but for all men. This word of the Lord must have free course, which depended upon human effort to a great extent. This was called to ordain a minister that the work of the Lord might be carried on more freely and assist in the mighty work of spreading the gierious gospel. When St. Paul, who was a preacher marvellous in power, asked the Thessaloniaus to pray for their minister. This text was intended to be the watchword and battle cry of every minister of the gospel. He especially im-minister of the gospel. He especially im-pressed upon them the necessity of prayer, se it was an unlimited source of blessing as it was an unlimited source of blessing in helping the great work. Praying congregations were always peaceful and prosperous. Each one in the congregation had his or her part to do and it could not be shirked as no one else could do it. He exhorted them not to idolize their minister or expect him to be perfection, but work shoulder to shoulder and pray without ceasing and the work was sure to prosper. After prayer and singing Rev. W. Lochead of Feneion Falls addressed the people. He invited all to be present at the evening services to welcome Mr. McTavish. He then proceeded with the ceremony of ordination, after which Rev. Mr. McTavish was formally inducted into the pastoral charge of the congregation. He was then charge of the congregation. He was then extended the right hand of fellowship by all the ministerial members of the presbytery as a co-worker of Christ. After singing from the 9th pealm the Rev. Mr. Rose of Woodville addressed Mr. McTavish. He impressed upon the pastor-elect the sol-emnity of the situation. That he was now a minister of the everlasting gospel, set spart for the glorious work of the Lord. St. Paul said, "Who is sufficient for these things?" None are sufficient except the Lord. He charged him to take heed of himself, to the doctrine and to the flock over which he had been made overseer, not to forsake his first love, and to be a man of prayer for himself and his people. man of prayer for himself and his people. Also to be a man of study, especially of the word of God and that part which contains the character, teachings and doings of him who is God man, the Lord Jesus Christ, and the way of salvation through him. Human nature was also an essential study as by it he would have more power over human nature which is in contact with God. To take heed unto the teachings of the doctrine, to get it fresh from the word of God, even as the Israelites gathered their manna, and to teach it to the congregation in as fresh a way as possible, not in flowery or merely literary language, but in those words which will express the ideas described. He should look after his flock diligently, the wicked as well as the good, figuratively the goats as well as the flock diligently, the wicked as well as the good, figuratively the goats as well as the sheep. In preaching publicly and in going from house to house to always remember that he was a servant of Christ, and keep as clear of worldly things as possible—to let politics alone. He trusted the congregation would do their part, and he would ever pray that he might be a successful minister of the Lord Jesus Christ. The Rey. Mr. Patterson then addressed the congregation. This was a grand day in the history of the congregation, a day long to be remembered; one long looked for but come at last. They were to be congregated on their choice. He was sure Mr. McTavish would endeavor faithfully to fulfil the solemn obligations which were now binding on him. There was great responsibility on each side, and it was necessary that both should do their part to have a good result. Mr. McTavish, as Christ's subassador, must have the support of the congregation, and as the result of the work was, for eternity it was necessary to do their hard. They altered trains the story of the congregation, and as the result of the work was, for eternity it was necessary to do their hard. They altered trains the congregation and a story of the congregation. congregation, and as the result of the work was for eternity it was necessary to do their best. They should take heed how they heard his preaching, as he came to preach not for his sake but for theirs. It was not the word of man they would hear but that of God, and if they accepted it as such they would find the church the house of God and the gate to heaven. He attached much importance to the prayers of the congregation for their minister and also to due support. Surely the laborer is worthy of his hire, therefore let him want for nothing. Regularity in all things was also necessary. Mr. Mc. Tavish would be expected to be in his place and it was as necessary, that, the congrega-

Tavisk would be expected to be in its place and it was as necessary, that, the congressation should be in theirs also at the proper time. They should be very jealous of his character and should be very jealous of his character and should all goods. He was pleased to hear of the progress of the congregations and felt assured all would go well. He would pay that God might still further prosper them.

The congregation had an opportunity of being introduced to their minister on retir-

THE BURGLARY CASE - MR. TARBOX ACQUITTED - SIR, - In the issue of your paper of the 30th ult., under the heading of Beaverton correspondence appeared an article with the caption "a thief bagged at article with the caption "a thief bagged at last," in which your correspondent after stating that a gang of thieves had been operating in Beaverton, goes on to say:—
"Government Detective Rogers of Toronto went to work at ferreting out the guilty parties, the result being that one of them, William Tarbox, by name, was arrested, tried, and committed to the county gaol for trial. A quantity of stolen goods were for trial. A quantity of stolen goods were found in the prisoner's house." In justice to Mr. Tarbox I ask permission to correct your Beaverton correspondent in the reck-less manner in which he supplies news and convicts a man before he has been tried. It is not true that Mr. Tarbox was one of a gang of thieves in Beaverton, nor that he was committed to the county gaol, nor that a quantity of stolen goods were having searched a number of houses in Beaverton in turn came to Tarbox's and searched it in his absence; finding a trunk searched it in his absence; finding a trunk locked he sent a messenger to Tarbox for his keys, which he promptly gave up. A parasol belonging to Mrs. A. P. Cockburn was found in his trunk for which he was arrested and committed for trial, bail being accepted. He was tried to-day at the general sessions and acquitted without the necessity of calling a witness in his behalf. The story of the parasol is, briefly this. necessity of calling a witness in his behalf. The story of the parasol is briefly this:—Mrs. Cockburn left her parasol at the station, Tarbox when passing to dinner saw it on the platform and took it up with the intention of handing it to the station agent but the door was locked and the agent gone to dinner. He then took it to his house and put it in the trunk so that his children should not get hold of it. His wife is dead and his eldest child is but twelve years of age and keeps house for him. He thought no more of the parasol until he was arrested as he does not require to use his trunk more than probably once a month. When he was arrested the railway company suspended him. Seventy-five of the leading citizens of Besverton have patitioned the company to restore him. Yours, etc.
