London has been startled by a wonder ful surgical operation. It consisted of the removal from he brain of a patient in the London hospital for epileps y and paralysis of a tumor about the size of a walnut. The location of the tumor was pointed out exactly by Dr. Hughes Bennett. The operacting surgeon found it just beneath where he was told to cut, and its size and character were what Dr. Bennett had declared they would be. Since the removal of the tumor the patient has been doing well, and his ultimate recovery is said to be only a question of time. Hitherto the brain has been regarded as beyond the reach of med ed selence, and even the removal of any portion of the skull has been consider ed . Affenely hazardeus,
