the subject of the Bandoft railway and the subject of the Bandoft railway and the Munkroud iron mires. He speared before that council, he said to explain to thus the position of the iron mines and railway in which he was an deeply interested, and to sain them. To appoint a consideration, to co-quente, if necessary, with the company, and to report to that council, they were aware that the company had a charter to construct a railway from the Victoria branch of the Middand railway to Bancroft, and towards the construction of that line the Dominion government had granted a subsidy of $3,200 per mile for fifty miles. The object of the railway was to open and develop the iron manufacture. They proposed to establish two blast furnaces, that at Irondale to be of a expacity of 38 tons per day. The furnaces would require a very large quantity of charcoal and fuel. So much that the consumption of wood would clear up ten acres each working day in the year. He had consulted with the Hon. Mr. Pardie, the commissioner of crown lands, and that gentlemen had assured him that the government would be assured to be agreed upon in the future. They proposed to ask the provincial government for a land grant of 5,000 acres for each mile of railway constructed by the company. The land would be liable to settlement outles and to taxation, and the company agreed to deposit in the hands of the government a sum of 25c, per acre, to be used in the promotion of settlement. The company deposit in the hands of the government a sum of 25c, per sere, to be used in the promotion of settlement. The company would sell the land to settlers, taking payment in wood. He found that the land would yield about 25 cords of wood to the sere. For this the company would pay in cash, retaining say one-tenth in payment of the land. The company would build houses and start the settlers fairly at their work. What the company aimed at was to settle the line of railway with men who would furnish them with wood for charcoal. His arrangements were now approaching completion, and the land grant from the provincial government was one of the matters that had to be fixed.

Mr. McArthur mentioned as an instance of the utility of deputations thatone had been sent down by Feneron Falls to get a mill race made. This was done, and it would not have been done if a deputation had not been sent. They had sent Mr. Logan down several times with advantageous results.

After some further remains the vote was taken and resulted in a tis—10 yeas and 10 nays. The warden voted with nays as he had voted nay at the Friday evening session.
