ARLES D. BARR, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR THE CHARGE AT BATOCHE.

[From the Mail.]
The family of the late Col. Williams, the gallant commander of the Midland battalion, have submitted to the Mail the diary of the campaign kept by the deceased offi-cer, from which the following entries detailing the fighting at Batoche, are taken: "Saturday, May 9.—Struck camp early and marched to Batoche, coming into collision with the enemy at 10 s.m. Made no progress and returned at nightfall. Entrenched our position by lasgering and ditching. 'A' company (Midland) out sil night on the river bank, "Sunday, May 10.—Advanced, skirmishing whole force, Midland covering bank of river and left of advance. All withdrawn at sunset to corral.

"Monday, May 11.—Advanced again, in same direction, but pushed forward beyond old lines and shelled the other side of the river from our advanced rifle pits. Made advance beyond the cemetery and captured pits of enemy. Not supported. Retired for evening as ordered by the general.

"Tuesday, May 12.—Owing to confusion of orders between the general and Colonel Straubenzie we did not advance until after of orders between the general and Colonel Straubenzie we did not advance until after dinner. Then, receiving suggestions from Col. Straubensie, we of the Midland pushed on with cheers on river slope. After advancing some time rapidly I ordered halt, and climbed to top of bank to view position. The two companies 'A' snd 'C' (Midland) had come on with a will and the cheers went up determined and strong. Not one man flinched. The fire was hot from the front and across the river. Major Kirwan now joined us and was most useful and plucky. My men were now lying down getting breath. They claimed that in addition to other firing the Grenadiers' fire was coming across from the right rear and cutting the trees above them. On climbing the bank I could not see any of our side, aithough I had a good view across the open and in view of the enemy's rifle pits. I urged Kirwan to go for a support, and shortly 'B' company of the 90th, under Captain Ruttan, came to our rear and we received them with cheers. Here from our line came the first cry of 'ambulance,' and here several of our men were wounded. I crawled to the bank again and called to the rear for Capt. Harstone of the Grenadiers, who was to have connected with us, but rear for Capt. Harstone of the Grenadiers, who was to have connected with us, but received no reply. Artillery then opened fired, and we saw the shell explode on the rifle pits of the enemy across the river. And now I intended to divide the force, one half under Major Hughes to sweep the river slope, the other to follow mein a rush or charge for the houses. The response was a noble and ready one. I then climbed the bank again and saw a few of the Grenadiers in a poplar bluff to our rear. I called again for Capt. Harstone, but could not connect with him. Then the Gatling gun opened on the right. This I explained to my men and told them now was the time to charge for the houses. I mounted the bank and called on one-half to follow. The cheer and rush were magnificent. As The cheer and rush were magnificent. As we advanced I ordered a portion to take possession of the log house on the left on the bank. It was a good strategic position and commanded the bank and advance. From this they rushed to Batoche's house. The Grenadiers, crossing our rear from right to left, followed my men to the log house and Batoche's. A slight dip occurred in the ground. Here I halted every man for breath and to getter slight dip occurred in the ground. Here I halted every man for breath and to gather in line. They obeyed my order, the 90th as well as the Midland, and as soon as they joined, after telling them I would command them, I ordered the charge across the open. I was leading, waving my forage cap (no sword) amid a shower of bullets. I reached across the open and shelt-cred for a moment under the log house in front of the large shop. I was there first, and looked around and saw a large number of the command kneeling and firing. Charlton of 'C' company (Midland), came in and another of my men. Three others Charlton of 'C' company (Midland), came in and another of my men. Three others followed, and I ordered them to get into the log shanty and we tore off the windows and they opened fire in the direction of the river. Where the track passed down the bullete fairly halled against the building, and then I ordered a rush for the shop, where we drew out the prisoners one by one from the cellar. They stated that others were in other houses. I then asked a few men to follow me and kicked in the doors of the houses and took possession of all of them on the line or street, instructing rushes for the other houses in rear to be made. MILLBROOK. A MALICIOUS ACT.—Mr. Wm. M. At noon yesterday the machine, which was in ex-cellent working order at the time, was left in the field while the workmen went to dinner. On their return they found that it had been tampered with and some of the parts removed, leaving it in such a state parts removed, leaving it in such a state that they were unable to proceed with the work until it had been fixed, although some sixty acres of barley were waiting to be cut. FATAL ACCIDENT.—Mr. Robert Preson of Lindsay, while at the farm of his son Albert, in Manvers, met with a terrible accident which caused his death in less than five minutes after it occurred. The ac-cident was reported in THE Postlast week, but the subjoined particulars will interest. Mr. Albert Preston's two hired men were engaged in hauling manure from the farm yard with two teams and wagons. One team was standing in the yard, the lines hanging on the hames, while one of the men was filling the wagon, it being about half-filled, Mr. Robert Preston, with the other man, was preparing to go with the other team and wagon to the woods for a load of wood, which he intended taking home to Lindsay next day. Mr. Preston stepped behind the double whiffle-tree and between it and the wagon to place in front the end-board of the wagon box. The front the end-board of the wagon-box. The horses became frightened and ran away. It is not known how Mr. Preston was killed, but it is thought that either one of the horses kicked him of the wagon struck him as they passed over him for the second team ran away when the noise commenced. When the body was taken up, it was found that the skull was completely broken in at the front of the head. The body was interped at St. Mary's cemetery on Thursday, 6th inst., being followed by a large concourse of sorrowing friends. CANNINGTON. [Correspondence of The Post.] DRAINAGE. - Some of the residents of this village having built upon lots where the water stands in pools after heavy rains wished to drain their lots, and acting under the "ditches and water courses act," called the parties interested together to see f they could arrange about the same, but having failed to agree they called on the engineer, Mr. George Smith, P.L.S., of Beaverton, who came here on Friday, the 7th inst., for the purpose of laying out the drain and apportioning to each party interested their share of the cost. Some of the parties through whose lots the drain is to run are objecting to having it run through their lots, claiming that it should be run on the streets and not through private pro-perty. The engineer took a survey of the ground but has not yet given his award. LACROSSE.—About two weeks ago the Camington lacrosse team went to Markham on invitation to play a friendly game with the Markham team, but found when they got there that the Markham team had attempthened themselyes by getting players from other places, and by that means they defeated the Cannington team. Areturn match was played here on Saturday, the 8th instant. The ball was faced about three o'clock. The Cannington team seemed to have rather the best of the game, as the ball was kept mostly toward the Markham goal, but they had a strong defeace and were able to keep it from going through. It was then thrown towards the Camington goal and was put through by one of the Markham man, thus giving them the first game after about an hours hard playing. After a short rest the ball was faced again and was got by the Camington to men and thrown towards the Markham man, thus giving them the first game and thrown towards the Markham man and thrown towards the Markham goal where after about two minutes play it was put through, thus giving Camington the second game. STREET PARADE. - The salvation army give a street parade once or twice a week. They find the "hieland man" man slow to adopt the new-fangled religion.

THE CROPS.—The spring wheat is very much rusted and two-thirds of the barley colored. Oats and potatoes look well.
YANKEE VISITORS.—Two stylish gents from Michigan have been spending a short vacation here. Who knows but this may become a "watering place" for such. We exhibition of this kind was going on some-body stated that the Little Brantford wouldn't work satisfactorily in a field of barley on Mr. Parson's farm. The chalbarley on Mr. Parson's farm. The challenge was at once taken up by Mr. William Cameron, the local agent, and an expert from the workshop putting the machine to the test in the presence of upwards of a hundred spectators. This was the worst tangled and lodged grain in the neighborhood, yet the machine performed its work to the satisfaction of all present. The machine used has been purchased by Messrs. Donald and Hugh Grant. Several orders were taken that day.

BASE BALL.—On Wednesday, the 5th inst., the return match between the Maple Leafs of Shaw's neighborhood and the Wide-Awakes of this place was played at Moss-side and resulted in the defeat of the visiting team. The game throughout was a most exciting one, in which victory flopped over from one side to the other. The game passed off without the slightest jangle or unpleasantness, which speaks well for the boys and their worthy umpire, Mr. W. Johnson of Seagrave. The Maple Leafs played a fine game and appeared to go right in for winning with W. Tripp as catcher, and he proved himself a good man, too. The pitching was well put in by T. Couch, P. Brouse and E. Broad, but the heavy batting of the Wide-Awakes proved too much for them, especially that of J. Gordon and J. Walsh, hitting the ball at will and making home base before the ball could be brought to play on them. The fielding of F. Purdy and J. Gordon was also admired by all and was hard to beat for farm boys. P. Purdy did the firing for the Wide-Awakes, and J. Walsh the catching which was done in a masterly and easy manner. Time was called on account of darkness after the 7th innings. The boys and spectators then made for the tables, where an excellent spread was awaiting them. The following is the score of runs: where an excellent spread was awaiting them. The following is the score of runs:
