Gentlemen,—Mr. R. J. Doyle, ascretary of this trust, has sent to the escatheddees of this trust, has sent to the escatheddees of circular and postcard. The circular has a long history of the efforts of the managers to float boads, which on the face of it is the strongest condemnation of the management, and proves that in action in issisting on the obligations of the company to hold its annual meeting of stockholders at the time and in manner fixed by its bylaws is fully justified.

The feeling of uncertainty and fear resulting from the peculiar conduct of the managers warrants me and all stockholders in demanding such a meeting as will, enable us to know with certainty where we stand, what has been done sud what is best to be done in the future. Without going into details I simply asky on not to sign the postcard sent you, but to unite with me in insisting that there shall be no more prevarication or unnecessary delay, but that the directors shall do as all well-conducted companies do, namely, send out a full audited annual report and call a meeting where it and all other matters:

D. iry butter packed in firkins in the spring and summer and brought to market in the autumn for exportation is, I may say, a thing of the past. Butterine has taken its place. The working people in England prefer butterine to the medium qualities of Canadian dairy butter, and the latter are unsalcable, except as grease.

This state of things is a most serious loss to Canada. Last year I paid out over $33,000 for butter, this year my purchases will probably amount to about $5,000—and taking the other buyers in Lindsay. Keene penetrating it had spent its force. A rauged hole was however made in the buckle and the bullet had touched the flesh, making a red spot about the size of a quarter of a dollar on the left side of his breast. The great consideration in the butter business is to send it as fresh as possible to market. This cannot very well be done with dairy butter, as it is now handled here.
