The Rural Post. LINDSAY, FRIDAY, MARCH 26, 1886. FARM AND FIRESIDE.

Hold March! Wild March! Oh! you saucy fellow! Even though your voice is rough. We know your heart is mellow.

Good Farming as a Teacher of Morals.

It behoves every man in every pursuit to do what he has to do to the best of his ability. For his own sake, not only because it pays him better, and wins for him more of what is desirable in the world.

Horse Dyspepsia.

The horse much resembles man in his physical make-up; both are afflicted with many like diseases. Dyspepsia is one of them. We hear men frequently say: "That horse is a hard keeper." True, in some instances, but generally the effect is caused by indigestion.

not likely to be one, and he certainly will not be taken to be such. The moral of this is, keep up your fences, keep down your weeds, clean out your fence corners, run your farm systematically, be prosperous and be honest, and you will be respected and have influence for good beyond what you may expect.

The Farmers' Paradise.

A man on his own farm, well cultivated and kept, well stocked, with good modern dwellings and barns and outbuildings, master of both time and acres, tied to no hours by the calls of bells or whistles, free to come and go according to the necessities of none but himself, mostly in his own fields, performing his healthful labors within sight of the smoke of his own chimneys, is surely as rich in the genuine sense of that word, as any man can, says the New England Farmer.

swallow, but at the same time would have drunk the whole bucket full—proving again his humanity by indulging taste instead of demand. Another remedy: If possible, use sugar to graining, which frequently itself works a cure. If by feeding the above some may take food and thus suffering result to be a profit to owner, I shall feel that it is not in vain I have written.

That Vacant Table.

Not the dinner table; but too often the evening reading table is vacant. Around it farmers do not gather to study of the forces, elements, properties, conditions, with which they have to deal, and they go out day after day as mere machines to do a certain amount of work solely with their hands.

Spinners' Farm and Garden Notes.

SOAK THEM IN OIL.—Many farmers think that as soon as wagon wheels begin to shrink they must go at once to the blacksmith shop and get the tire set. Instead of doing that (which is often a damage to the wheels, causing them to die), if they will get some linned oil and heat it boiling hot and give the felloes all the oil they can take, it will fill them up to their usual size, and tighten to keep them from shrinking, and also to keep out the water.

GREEN FODDER FOR POULTRY IN WINTER.

How to procure green fodder for poultry in winter has been solved by a farmer at South Easton, Mass. He sows a piece of rye in August quite thickly, and by mowing he gets it 12 inches high—a mass of green vegetation. When frozen solid, and before the snow covers it, he cuts and packs it away in an out-house, where it remains frozen until needed. Every day or two in winter he exposes a portion of this to the warm air until thawed, and then chops it fine for his hens. A free use of this green food alternately with boiled potatoes and cabbage, gives healthy fowls and an abundance of eggs.
