The display will be rich and elegant and comprise the most fashionable millinery fabrics and styles. The millinery department is under the management of Miss Nelson, who will not fail to attend to the wishes of customers very sat-isfactorily. Mr. Graham has issued (from the gress of THE PORT) his usual neat invitation eard, which will be mailed to ladies in town and country.

—A committee is to be appointed—nothing can well be done without a committee—to make arrangements for either an annual supper or dinner of the curling club. The committee will appoint themselves and afterwards themselves will report to the club, and an evening or date will be appointed. The idea is a good one and should become an institution of the club even if it is a little late to bring it on for this season. The sporting auditors statement of the Peterboro curling club has been handed in, showing a total of eighteen foreign matches played by the club of which ten were won and eight lest. One of the wins gained the club the Caledonian medal for the district. The saggeste score of the winning matches is 168 shots, while the aggregate of losses is 125 shots.

The weather yesterday (Thursday) was bright and warm and gave additional emphasis to the rich and varied display. The cartire length of the large second flat was devoted to the exhibition and included carpets and house-furnishings in rich and varied profusion. The centre of attraction for Indies was, however, the millinery show-room. The walls were draped with new and choice silks and hoese and groups of hundrome plannes, feathers, flowers and millinery trimmings. The silk department was especially attractive, several unique lines being confined exclusively to the firm. The trimmed hats and bonnets were of the very latest Parisian, London and Kew York modes, and in such variety as to present a bewildering array of color, shape and rich effects. So varied are the styles that to even enumerate them would take more space than can well be spared for that purpose, but our lady readers should make a point of seeing the opening. The carpet display is very handsome, showing velver, brussels and tapestry carpets, rags, mats, etc. The millinery department is under charge of Miss Kenny, and the success of the display made is very creditable to the lady's taste and skill.

The enforced brevity of sur report of the case of the queen against Martin Devine, which appeared in the criminal cases at the December sitrings of the county court, would make it appear that Mr. Devine was a criminal. The action concerned a boundary, and was brought by the township council under the belief that under the Emily act Mr. Devine would be compelled to move his fence on the quarter line, by which he would lose from five to six acres of land. But the fence and road had been as at present for over fifty years, and the Emily act did not apply to it. The judge withdrew the indictment from the jury, and entered a verdict of acquittal without calling upon the defence for evidence. It is only fair to Mr. Devine that hese particulars should be published. Mr. John McSweys conducted the case for the defence.

He advances six reasons why a cash business only should be a successful one for himself and a profitable one for his customers. These reasons have common sense to back them up and are convincingly plain and matter-of-fact. It would be well if Mr. Hurley's example were more generally followed, as the cash business is the business that gives its returns with a minimum of expense. A Visit to Bundes & Flavelle Bros'. Es

Persons walking along Kent-st. Thursday of store of Dundas & Flavelle Bros. Being curious to ascertain the cause our reporter was informed it was their usual spring opening, which has ed it was their usual spring opening, which has come to be recognized as one of the mediums of knowing the fashien demands of the season. We will not attempt to describe the fairy-like appearance of the room and the immense display of novelties and delicate fabrics. Sufficient will be to mention the three main attractions—the millinery, mantles and carpets. The very large display of millinery in all its attractions and enticements certainly reflects great credit on the taste and skill of the management. Success in this department not only depends on the beauty of work, but in harmonious arrangement of celors and shades. The rich effect always produced in silk mantle goods is hand-somely displayed in dolmans, jackets and mantles. The finish and style of these pattern goods speak in the highest terms of the skill of their new mantle maker. Their carpet department, which is being continually added to, appeared to better advantage than ever. The floor was covered with a handsome velvet carpet, the sides were piled up with immense stacks of brussels and tapestry carpets and the walls were draped with the newest designs of housefurnishings, including the pountar Mikade curtains. The enterprise and pith of this firm deserves the patronage so liberally given them as few towns can boast of a more complete and varied stock.
