-A London cable says:-The Glasgow people have a stronger personal feeling towards Mr. Gladetone than those of Edinburgh, therefore Mr. Moriey had a warm reception there last Friday night. In the afternoon a conference of delegates from Liberal associations from Scotland was held, lasting over three hours. A proposition introduced by a member describing the Irish people as unfit for self-government. secured no seconder. A resolution in favor of Mr. Gladstone's scheme was finally car-ried by about 60 to 19. The purchase bill only received meagre attention both in the afternoon and in the evening. At the meeting in St. Andrew's hall Mr. Moriev won a attempted suicide by swallowing Paris green. Medical assistance was procurred but he is not out of danger yet.

This was not received with much warrath. The chief interest in the speech centred round what he would sav regarding Irish representation at Westminster. When the audience understood that his intimation that the door of consideration was not closed, and the scheme was not a cast iron one it cheer.

the scheme was not a cast iron one, it cheered loudly. His words about the Irisk members were as follows: "The difficulty can be bers were as follows: "The difficulty can be met by some such suggestion as I ventured to make in the house of commons. What I ventured to suggest has since been supported by a man of greater authority and experience in the house than I. It was an interregnum for two or three years to let Irsiand get the benefit of all the facilities and all the capacity of Irsiand to set this new machinery agoing. If at the end of these two, three or five years there is then a desire felt or expressed on the part of the Irish people to revert once more to their old position, whether in a reduced number or otherwise at Westminster, I think it would be an arrangement which all Englishmen or Scotchmen might most gladly fall in with and against which no Irishman would have very much to say." This is a hint that the government is ready to modify the scheme on this important point. Mr. Morley's own suggestion simply goes to pave the way for a graceful retreat.

almost totally destroyed by fire, during the progress of which ten persons were killed. The towns of Drohobyez, Boxaniec and Chyrow have been completely destroyed, and the town of Sanok has been greatly damaged. At Chyrow a man was caught in the act of setting fire to the buildings.

—The alleged astablish that this, Mr. Morley's distinct announcement that the government has consented to regard the retention of the Irish members at Westminister as an open question, removes one of the principal grounds of opposition to the home rule bill as originally introduced. The speech referred to is regarded as the probable prelude of an announcement that all the clauses of the home rule bill involving any serious contentions will likewise be left open, to be dealt with when the bill reaches the committee stage. It will be, in fact, a declaration that the measure is simply the groundwork of some home rule plan to be determined upon by the house after full discussion, and that nothing except the principle of home rule is to be insisted upon by Mr. Gladstone. Whether this unusual course in regard to a government measure will result in the formulation and adoption of a "workable measure," to use Gladstone's

Two elopements took place the other day in Terouto. George Ward, a man nearly sixty years of age, with a wife and grown-up family, disappeared with a young woman named Speedy, employed as nurse girl. The other case is that of James Gaynor, gardner at Deer Park, who has eloped with a young girl, leaving behind him a wife and eight children, the youngest being only three months old. All the money he left with his wife was three cents.

-A London cable to the New York Evening Post says: Above the elamor of innumerable speeches, and smid yards of correspondence in every paper, two points with pondence in every paper, two points with regard to the Irish question can be detected aradually growing clear. First, the country as a whole will not tolerate the exclusion of the Irish members from the imperial parliament. Second, the outcome of the whole discussion will be to bring imperiat federation several stages nearer. From private, as well as public sources, I learn that Seotland will insist, with one voice, that the Irish members shall remain at Westminister. In fact, this point can be almost regarded as settled over Mr. Gladstone's head. The Edinburgh liberals as a body object to the home rule bill, not because it concedes home rule, but because it cause it concedes home rule, but because it concedes home rule of a wrong kind, or rather in a wrong way. In brief, they want a general system under which Scotland as well as Ireland could partake of the benefits of self government. Especially do they include the presents. ints of self government. Especially do they insist upon the presence in the imperial parliament at Westminister of representatives of the states whose domestic business is transacted in the home parliament. The imperial federation idea, in short, has taken a strong hold on the Scotch people. If Ireland is not represented at Westminister now, they say, how shall we be when our turn for home rule comes?

mote districts lying beyond the reach of ordinary political excitement, I have received conclusive assurances that kindred people regard with warm, fraternal sympathy the attempt to settle once for all the troubled relations between England and Ireland, which exhibit the one and only great failure of the political genius of our race to confront and master a difficulty, and to obtain in a reasonable degree the main ends of civilized life. He then gives a history of attempts to conciliate or coerce Ireland, and adds: Watching from day to day the movement of currents of opinion during the present conflicts, more and more I find it vital to observe points at which dividing lines are drawn. On the side adverse to the government are found, as I sorrowfully admit, in profuse abundance, station, title, wealth, social inceived conclusive assurances that kindred with and against which no Irishman would have very much to say." This is a hint that the government is ready to modify the scheme on this important point. Mr. Morley's own suggestion simply goes to pave the way for a graceful retreat.

though now enriched at our cost with a valuable contingent of recruits that has fought in every one of the great political battles of the last sixty years and has been defeated. We have a great aim be fore us now. It is to restore your parliamentary efficiency by dividing and removing the obstacles to its work. To treat the Irish question with due regard to its specialties but with the same thoroughness of method by which we have solved colonial problems that, fifty years back, were hardly if at all less formidable. To give heed to the voice of the people speaking in tones of moderation by the mouth of the vast majority of those whom we curseives have made its constitutional representatives, and thus to strengthen and consolidate the empire on the basis of mutual benefit and hearty loyalty. Such is the end. As for the means, we take the establishment in Dublin of a legislative body, empowered to make laws we take the establishment in Duoin or a legislative body, empowered to make laws for the Irish as contradistinguished from Imperial affairs.
