HOME RULE AT OTTAWA HE CHIEFTAIN OUT-GENER.

Last night was a great night for Ireland. It was not, however, quite so propition for Irishman-who are members for the mons. They tried the impossible feat of appearing to be in favor of sympathy with some rule without offending Sir John onald. One cannot run with the hare and hunt with the hounds, you cannot serve heaven and remain on terms of intimacy with the gentleman from another place. The thing has often been tried and is always a failure. The success of the evening, therefore, on the conservative side, was John White, the member for East Hastings. He is an Orangeman, he doesn't like home rule, he says Ireland does not want it, England doesn't want it, and so he would have none of it. Motion, amend-ing with a diumh voice for the seast himself slightly in his seat and crouched ready to spring to his feet the moment the last word was read. As the seven was read. As the speak man description in his seat and crouched ready to spring to his feet the moment the last word was read. As the seven was the speak was a suitable via might have head a sum drop." As the clerk finished Mr. Blake sprang, his voice full of excitement and his hair more and more over his forehead, to explain that this was speak-ing with a diumh voice for the arealy and crouched ready to spring to his feet the moment the last word was read. As the speaker ended he was up, the house in a state of tension to know what was coming, but he had to sit down again while the assistant clerk read the motion in French, during which, as some one remarked, "the assistant clerk read the motion in French, during which, as some one remarked, "the assistant clerk read the motion in French, during which, as some one remarked, "the assistant clerk read the motion in French, during which, as some one remarked, "the assistant clerk read the motion in French, during which, as some one remarked, "the assistant clerk read the motion in French, during which, as some one remarked, "the assistant clerk read the motion in French, during which, as some one remarked, "the assistant clerk read the motion in French, during which have been been as the moment the last word was read. As the clerk finished the moment to know up the had to sit down again while the assistant clerk read the motion in French, during the had to sit down again while the assistant clerk read the motion in French, during the had to sit down ag timacy with the gentleman from another the house of commons had no authority to communicate any such communication to the members, and Mr. Kirkpatrick was asked to say whether this was the case or not. He admitted that it was. All he would do in a like case would be to send the communication to the prime minister. "All right," said Sir John, "and, no doubt, the English prime minister will get it in the same way." "Oh, then," said Blake, "we are to send a resolution of the commons of Canada designed for the information of the prime minister of England, not to himself, but to a gentleman who may or als to send the passed resolution to Gladstone, to Parnell, to the Speaker, to Tupper, to the beadle of Burlington arcade, all were equally distasteful to him, and he voted straight without any hesitation against each and every. McNeil, Wallace of York, and O'Brien, though they, too, hated the thing, compromised and voted through the several divisions with one eye on Sir John and the other on their constituents; all several divisions with one eye on Sir John and the other on their constituents; all other Irishmen amongst the government supporters hesitated, slipped, floundered and fell. Before recess Mr. Costigan had explained his position and had endeavored to taunt Mr. Blake into some outburst that would have permitted a general muddling of the whole thing to be cleared by a straight party vote, but this failed. Accordingly he moved an amendment to the resolution declaring against Blake's proposal, and indulged in another little biographical reminiscence in doing it. A debate followed on this, and when six o'clock came Mr. McMullen, who was speaking, against the amendment, had the floor. Before the house met, after recess, it tran-

and caimed himself at Sir John's expense. It was then clear that the speaker move would not do, so another hurried consultation was held around Sir John's chair, which caused Sir Adolphe Caron to look extremely indignant at being continually wakened up in this way when within measurable distance of dropping off to also for when the husiness in the small POOR JOHN COSTIGAN'S TROUBLES eep; for when the business in the small hours does not concern him he doesn't Mr. Costigan was very much disturbed meddle with it, but goes to sleep to occa-sionally fall over on Langevin's shoulder; and it was determined to put the minister by Mr. Blake's resolution and the debate of the afternoon, and he felt that the ideal of justice up with an amendment to send the address to Sir Charles Tupper with instructions to show it to the English members of parliament. He had at first John Costigan was in danger of disappear ing and that the real John Costigan, as his connection with Sir John Macdonald comspoken of the colonial secretary, but this had a smack of Downing st. rule that made it unsafe in the present temper of the house to propose it. He therefore substituted Sir Charles Tupper.

The apposition as one mer hunt out. pels him to be, would supplant the more agreeable image. He had been very uneasy brough the afternoon's sitting, and reces though it brought dinner, brought no men-tal relief. The caucus, therefore, was held, The opposition as one man burst out laughing at this proposal, and even Mr. Thompson himself and some friends round tal relief. The caucus, therefore, was held, and it was determined to prepare an amendment to the amendment, and to shut off any inconvenient proposals from the opposite side. But, when the house resumed its sitting, Mr. McMullen was there. He spoke for a short time longer, choosing his phrases to lead up to the denouement he intended, and placed in the clerk's hands an amendment to the amendment which embodied a portion of what Blake's motion could only with difficulty keep counter "Is the high commissioner to send it out with a circular?" asked Mr. Cameran. "No, advertise it," said another.
"Have it framed and hung up in the ex "Have it framed and hung up in the exhibition," suggested a third, "to be viewed on presentation of a visiting card." And the minister of justice's proposal served for some little time to afford infinite material for merry jest. But Sir John saw no other way out of it, and so once more went forth the monotonous tones "call in the members," and the house voted as Sir John wished. Had I been a member I should have suggested that for Sir Charles' embodied a portion of what Blake's motion had contained, and something more. Sir John's side do not like Mr. McMullen, and they yell and whose and cry out like dogs and cats and asses when he votes, but their ordinary enmity towards him is mild in comparison with what they felt when they discovered that their intended manceuvre had been balked by him. Mr. Mc. Mullen! Yah! Whoop! Whistle! Oh! Even Sir John showed that he realized he had been out-generalled but, except on rare should have suggested that for Sir Charles' convenience it should now be sent to some leading advertising firm, perhaps Skinner, as he publishes the Canadian Gazette, with a cheque for $500 and instructions to advertise it in the leading papers so far as the money would conhad been out-generalled but, except on rare occasions when he loses his temper, he behaves like a gentleman, so he sat back in his chair, reclined his head against the cushion and burst out laughing. Costigan looked bluer than ever, Bowell sat back and chuckled, a soft smile of perception flickered round Sir Hecter's mouth, Pope had gone to bed, and Sir Adolphe put up his glass, looked steadily for a moment at Sir John, and wondered what the devil these fellows were all about. But it was not Sir John's programme that any sympathy-with-home-rule resolution should pass if he could help it, and certainly not Mr. Blake's or Mr. McMullen's. At the same time he was unwilling to go too SIR JOHN BADLY WORSTED. Sir John has been so far successful that he succeeded in retaining a sufficient maiority to kill the resolution, though it is to be expected that he has killed some of his Irish followers indoing it, but I have never before seen him so badly worsted, strategically speaking, nor his followers so demoralized as they were last night. Point after point was turned by Mr. Blake, the more explanation that was attempted the worse things graw in front of him was Blake. not Mr. Blake's or Mr. McMullen's. At the same time he was unwilling to go too far against the grain of his Irish supporters, and he must have felt some pity for his colleague of the inland revenue. Besides, there were ominous signs of discontent. Mr. Mitchell was out in full force on behalf of Blake's resolution or, if he could not get that, for McMullen's amendment to Costigan's amendment, and others here and there on the government benches were kicking. In this disamms, which could in no way be avoided, Sir John sat patiently watching events. The opposition speakers who followed Blake, amongst them Paterson of Brant, Casey and Landerkin, had been putting the case in a way very awkward for the government to meet, and as soon as possible the members were called in and McMullen's amendment voted down. But the majority was not a large things grew, in front of him was Blake and his solid force, on his flank was Mitand his solid force, on his flank was Mitchell fighting to save the resolution from emasculation, and round him his usual supporters, even the deputy-speaker, voting in a go-as-you-please manner sometimes for and sometimes against him. There was a loss of pressige in it, an ominous shadow of possible coming events, the too dear price of gratifying the dislike to letting Blake gain any credit. The debate was a singularly good-tempered one. It might have been expected that on such a subject and with so much Irish in the air it would lead to quarrel, but there was air it would lead to quarrel, but there was no malice. The galleries were filled until midnight, and even far into the morning they were well occupied, a number remaining to the end. At half-next four we all members ed in and McMullen's amendment voted down. But the majority was not a large one, several government members having broken away. Costigua's amendment was then carried by a similar majority, and the government men began to smile as if a little more at case, feeling that if they were not quite out of the woods at any rate they were on the edge of it, and if they had been scratched a little at any rate the Orangemen had not been as obstreperous as they might have been, and that the other Irishmen might be induced to swallow the amendment with a little personsion. But this satisfaction was short-lived. number remaining to the end. At hair past four we all, members, pressmen and spectators, streamed out of the buildings into the fresh morning air, the birds chirpling in the branches and the sun lighting the heavens over the Rideau with a band of softened color. A number of ladies had seen the sitting through, and so our work being over and the fun at an end, "we went home with the girls in the morning."

But the wind was in a measure taken out of this sail by Blake stating that he had no of jection to include Mr. Gladstone, who was prime minister and author of the bill. An attempt was then made to add Lord Salisbury's heatility to home rule, so that was abandoned. By this time Sir John recognized the impropriety of the proposal, and said Coughlin's motion would be withdrawn, but the opposition would not allow this, so the words again fell from Mr. Speaker's mouth: "Call in the members."

The Parnell proposition was then voted down by the government and opposition, some twenty members, including Mr. Mirchell, who had voted for Parnell to save the resolution from burial, supporting it. This left Sir John face to face with the proposal to forward a copy to Mr. Gladstone, to which he would in no wise consent, but to swich he would in no wise consent, but to avoid which he hardly saw the way. [Correspondence of The Post.] SCHOOL REPORT. - The following is the standing of senior classes in the Foley Institute for the month of April. Names are inserted in order of merit. Fourth class senior.—John Barker, Mary Bradley, McRae, Wm. Barker, Nellie Gattie, Roach. Third class.—Edward Barker, Joe Donnelly, Joe Murphy, John Koster. WM. CONNOLLY, teacher.

COURT OF REVISION. -The Mara court of revision will meet on Saturday, the 29th inst., at eleven o'clock at the town hall. LAW OFFICE. -Mr. Hayes, barrister, etc., of Beaverton, has opened a branch office

PAINFUL ACCIDENT. -Mr. Archie McKen zie, one of our merchants, received a sericus injury, from the effects of which he is confined to his room. While walking on Main street his foot went through a hole in the sidewalk, which is in a very dilapidated state and really dangerous to go out on after night, and it was said his leg was broken. Dr. Gilpin attended and is good authority for saying that it was not broken but badly sprained. There may be a suit against the corporation to recover damages on account of the injuries received, loss of BUILDING.—Mr. J. P. Foley is having some new dwelling houses erected. Mr.W. Johnston is the contractor and is pushing the work to completion in good style. Mr. Graham, contractor, has quite a number at work on the addition to the Foley separate school and expects to have it finished at an early date. Mr. Foley's enterprise and lib. erality are commendable.

WOODVILLE.

[Correspondence of The Post.]
MILLINERY.—The Misses McKinnon's millinery rooms are the great centre of attraction in the village just now. As they, keep in stock the latest and nobbiest styles their patronage is steadily growing. NEW STORE. - Mr. D. K. Campbell has opened out a grocery store in Jas. A. Mit-cheil's old stand. Mr. Campbell is an experienced business man and will do well here.

Hog Shipment.—Mr. Openhammer shipped a carload of hogs from this station for the Toronto market on Tuesday.

REAL ESTATE.—Mr. A. B. McLean purchased the property occupied by Mr. N. Mc.
Neil from Mr. Jas. Harwood and will go into the manufacture of carriages and wag-gons extensively. Mr. McLean is a push-ing business man and is sure to succeed. Mr. McNeill has purchased premises elsewhere in the village and will continue in business as heretofore.

Business. -Stoddart's furniture and undertaking emporium is booming just now and he is constantly receiving large con-signments of very nobby furniture. There has been an unusual demand for furniture this spring, owing to the large number of marriages. So may it be.

Division Court.—The division court was held here on Monday. There were only a few cases on the docket to dispose of. Judge Dean presided.

Participation of the court and described to th Band Concert.—The concert and drama under the auspices of the Woodville brass band on Friday night was a success as to numbers; but as for the drama "M'liss" it appears to be a disputed point. Probably if it were played over again it might be decided. Saturday evening "Dora" was given to rather a small house. The play was well received. CHANGE.—We understand that Mr. D.D. Ross, our popular hardware merchant, is about to move across the street, and that W. H. Campbell is to put in a stock of dry goods and groceries in the same shor along with him, each to have one side of

along with him, each to have one side of the store.

PRISONAL.—Captain Sinciair was in town last week. The captain is looking well, although he suffers from a very sore eye. He expects to start sailing on his old trip about the lat June.

Going to the Northwest.—Already the Scott act has had the effect of closing one of our hotels. Mr. Hugh McCorquodala, who has been running the Northern hotel, is quitting and purposes moving to the Northwest.

hotel, is quitting and purposes moving to the Northwest.

DISPLAY OF PICTURES.—A very pleasing feature of the concert Friday night was the display of pictures executed by the class who were under the tuition of Mr. Lones. Many of them showed artistic skill.
