-A London cable says: The sixth clopsment in as many weeks is reported from a village a few miles from Warwick. A lady about 30 years of age, very wealthy, and who is connected by birth with a noble family, has for some time been the ruling spirit of the Baptist Sunday school. A few days ago she left her home for an inland watering place and was joined upon her arrival by a ploughboy of the same village about 18 years of age, and anything but intelligent and prepossessing. Yesterday a letter was received from the ploughboy, in which he stated that his bride had given him £1,000 ($5,000) and that they were shout to cross the water to America on a wedding trip. The lady's family are terribly broken up over the mesallance, and the elopement will furnish talk enough to last the village gossips for a year to come. -- Henry Labouchere cables the New York World from London: "The liberal party is not just now in a very prosperous condition. For the party again to be triumphant it must be distinctly understood that its program must be radical and that its leaders are not to be gentlemen struggiing for office, but executive officers with a mandate in season and out of season to advocate certain measures until they become law. The newspapers are slways discussing what this liberal leader or that liberal leader thinks, and they seem to imngine that this is of paramount importance. The question really is what the party collectively thinks, and those leaders who are not prepared to give this collective opinion a practical effect must stand. Of late there has been a great tendency to 'fetish' worship. Mr. Disraeli was a 'fetish,' Mr. Gladstone was a 'fetish,' Lord Randolph Churchstone was a 'fetish,' Lord Randolph Churchill is rapidly assuming the position of a 'fetish.' This is all very well for the conservatives, whose doctrine it is that the few are born to rule and the many to obey, but it is contrary to the very idea of radicalism, which is that the collective votes of all is a better guide than the wisdom of one. Our 'fetish' should be our principles. I have reason to believe that parliament will meet on Tuesday, the 8th of Feb. The Queen intends to attend the opening, but the announcment that there will be a when her majesty opened parliament in January last. It seems to me that the time has arrived when a manifestly fair and proper reform in connection with payments to the royal family should be carried out. A ministerial pension is slways in abeyance when its holder is in office and recipients of military or naval service pensions do not get them when employed. It is, therefore, only right that when a prince is appointed to a salaried office the smount of his pay should be deducted from the income granted to him by parliament. The Duke of Cannaught holds the Rawal Pindii command, which I believe is worth about $26,000 a year. Surely therefore, this amount should be deducted from the $125,000 a year which he received from the country; and the same rule should slee apply to the Duko of Edinburgh while he holds the command of the Miditerraceas squadron. It comes very hard on deserving officers of both services to find all the best berths given to royalists, who grab the public money with both hands, holding out one for their exhorbitant allowances, and the other for the pay or salary attached to their

-A London cable save: At a meeting of the liberal federation at Leeds John Morley, speaking on the resolution to reaffirm Mr. Gladatone's home rule policy, said the party were on the eye of a great battle. The liberals remained staunch. Something had been said about the concilliation of diswould be better for the present to leave them alone. The liberals could stand by their old policy and their old leader. They felt now mars than ever the views of the Irish electors must be met, or the Irish question would never be settled. Resolutions expressing continued confidence in Mr. Gladstone and approval of the decision of the conference were carried by acclama-tion, as was also a vote to Mr. Morley.... Mr. Morley's emphatic declaration at Leeds that there would be no surrender of the leading principles of Mr. Gladstone's Irlah bill has sufficed to suppress the threatened meeting by a small minority in favor of conciliating the unionists, and the conference results in widening the breach be-tween the liberals and the unionists. The policy of the Gladstonian leaders is largely influenced by their knowledge of the closer alliance between Lord Saliebury and Lord Hartington rendering all overtures for the conciliation of the latter futile. Since the cabinet councils were resumed Lord Salisbury, Lord Hartington and Sir Michael Hicks-Beach have had long interviews at Devonshire house daily on the Irish policy. Yesterday Lord Hartington called a meeting of the unionist leaders to confer with the executive committee of the liberal unionist association. It was decided to hold a general conference in London of all hold a general conference in London of all the branches in the provinces to demonstrate that true liberalism continues opposed to Gladstonian home rule.... Mr. Biggar, in a speech at Bath, denied that Ireland was unable to afford an army and savy, and desired to pay her proportion of the expenses of England is order to get England's protection in rature. The London expenses of England in order to get England's protection in return... The London Standard says: "The great lesson of the Leeds conference is that where the liberal party stood last account there it still stands on the unalterable basis of an independent parliament for Ireland. This determination to abide by the principle of home rule at any cost partakes, it must be allowed as parliament for Ireland. This determination to abide by the principle of home rule at any cost partakes, it must be allowed, of the heroic. Whatever we think of its wisdom it shuts the does of office to liberals for an indefinite period, and drives into still closer union with the conservatives the very statesmen who alone are capable of regaining for liberalism the country's confidence.".... There has been a marked decrease of crime in Kerry, partly owing to the landlorde reducing their rents and

-Mr. Henry Chaplin has once more run up the flag of revolt. His speech last Friday night at Radeliffe is a distinct disavowal of Lord Randolph Churchill's proposed closure by a bare majority. He traverses Lord Randolph's arguments at Bradford, and in some respects vindicates Mr. Gladstone from Lord Randolph's attacks. He is, however, willing to accept closure by a two thirds majority, and this closure by a two-thirds majority, and this plan is most likely to meet with the general approval of the house.

-An exceedingly interesting case was tried at the Walkerton assizes last week before Judge O'Connor. One McIntosh of before Judge O'Connor. One McIntosh of Southampton applied for an injunction to restrain his neighbor Harrison from keeping bees. It sppears that Mr. Harrison has about eighty hives of bees, which were flying all over the neighborhood and were a great nusiance, especially to the plaintiff, who is a blacksmith, they fly about the shop and sting customer's horses. They were also very troublesome when making preserves, swarming around McIntosh's kitchen in large numbers. The jury brought in a verdict that they were a nuisance and in a verdict that they were a nuisance and that the plaintiff was entitled to an injunction. Judge O'Connor said it was a novel case, and that he would not grant the injunction, but reserved it for argument in full court. The case was keenly contested.

A very large number of witnesses were examined, many of whom were brought from a distance by the defence.

-Another daring jumping feat was successfully accomplished at Niagara Sunday by Lawrence M. Donovan, a print r, who came to the Falls Saturday evening on a wager of $500 to jump from the new suspension bridge into the Nisgara river. At seven o'clock Sunday morning Donavan drove on to the centre of the bridge in a buggy with a friend, mounted the railing, awung himself over the side and dropped 195 feet into the Niagara river with all his clothes and boots on. He made a straight but the amountement that there will be a full state ceremony is fictitious, as the arvan up uninjured, but somewhat shaken up. The weather was anything but agreeable for a bath. It snowed all night and the surroundings had a wintery appearance. The atmosphere was cold and raw. On reaching the shore Donovan was taken in a carriage to Dr. Clarke's office, where he was examined and one of his ribe was found to be broken. He does not, however, anticipate any serious trouble from this, and is quite elated over his feat. -A London Sunday cable says: The Leads conference has adopted the line expected of it. Without definitely rejecting the dissident liberals it has declared for such a platform as makes it impossible for them to co-operate. "The old man" and "the old cause," which were the watchwords of the occasion, are impossible to the dissident, and for the moment all talk of remnion is impossible. Moreover the cleavage is increasing in other ways. The party platform adopted at Leeds for the first time includes such radical projects as disestablishment in Wales, and a general though hazy declaration of religious equality all around. Likwise, free schools and non-intervention in European affairs. One need hardly remark that apart from the project of an Irish legislature this liberal program must be far too advanced for Lord Hartington and his whig allies. In another direction the conference has done an act which must keep the the home rulers and the Chamberlain section apart for a long time to come. Mr. John Moriey's speech, delivered from written notes after a visit to Hawarden, suggests the origin of the attack upon Mr. Chamberlain. For the first time a leading public man has declared Mr. Chamberlain to be at the head of a combination to expel Mr. Gladstone from the libertal life. political life, and the whole liberal party as represented at Leeds, declared by its thundering applause that it will revenge
