SPECTACLES.

It is a popular fallacy that the use of glasses should be delayed as long as possible for fear they will become indispenreading and thinking beings who have any proper appreciation of the value of time they have already become indispensable to those who can work more easily with better use for our strength than to waste it in a gymnastic contest against time, when we are sure to be losers in the end.

By working the ciliary muscle very hard we can overcome the rigidity of the lens even after it has ceased to respond to ordinary efforts. But persistence in such effort merely obliges us to close our books earlier in the day, and lose in time what cannot be made up by the satisfaction of being still independent of glasses. Werr-iness, neuralgia, nervous prostration, and other ills are the rewards of too great obstinacy in such a course. Glasses bear the same relation to civilized life as surface cars, carriages, and other modern conveniences. We could get along without them. But why should we? The luxury of having them is far greater than the luxury of doing without them. We all know to much to enjoy the drudgery of putting one foot before the other by the hour; and as for reading and writing, if we have extra strength we can spend it to good advantage by increasing the number of hours with glasses rather than by in-creasing our labor by going without them.

It is well known that when we have once resigned ourselves to spectacles, and have consented to yield to the claims of advancing years, we must gradually in-crease the strength of the glasses used un-til until what? Well, that is a question which seems to have an unknown terror for some who have seked it. The snewer is merely this: "Until we have reached the highest number ever used for such we merely keep on using it without the inconvenience of further change. But suppose even that glass ceases to be strong enough? Then we have "broken the re-

SCOTTISH CHAMPION, weight 1,330 lbs., was imported by John and F. Scott, bred by M. G. Fergusen, Pettitchie, Moneymuck, Scotland, He is a beautiful dappled brown horse, stands 16 hasds 2 inches high, with fine symmetry, short, boney legs, sound feet, of remarkably good temper and action, which cannot be surpassed; is a sure foal-getter. He has been shown 26 times and taken 22 first prizes. His stock has taken first prize wherever shown, taking first prize and diploma at Toronto and Kingston in 1862.

prize and diploms at Toronto and Kingston in 1822.

SCOTTISH CHAMPION was sired by the celebrated horse Pope, alias Young Pope (583). Young Pope was got by the celebrated horse Old Pope, the preperty of Mr. Lawson, Old Mill. Old Pope was very successful in gaining the Highland society's medals and show prizes. Young Pope's dam was a dark Clydesdale mare, and the winner of forty-two first prizes, south and north, in Aberdeashire. Section Champion's dam was a black Clydesdale mare, Maggie, which was a successful prize-taker, defeating all Scotland for several years. Her sire, Peacock (586), was got by the celebrated horse Old Peacock, which was the winner of nine first prizes given by different societies in Scotland. His dam was a pure Clydesdale mare belonging to the Duke of Bucciough, which was a very successful prize-taker.

There were sailors who feared to follow Columbus to the Western world lest they should drop off the other side when they got there; but when they found the other side there was no place for them to drop off. The same mistake is made by those people who are very reluctant to change the number of their glasses with increasing age. They continually object to the oculist's advice, and say they are afraid they will get to the end. They do not seem to realists that the end is very like the beginning, and they will be just as well off at one end at at the other. On the other hand, as it is an object to have the eyes grow old skewly, the best way would be to follow up the changes carefully, for the harder we work the faster we wear out, and the worse our glasses fit us the harder we work.

SEASON.

Is now at hand and the women folks of the houses are making it lively for the male portion of the community. Everything is topsyturvy, and the man who is in the habit of taking his habitual afterdinner smoke in his comfortable arm chair is now obliged to roost on the fence or apply his energies towards tearing up or putting down carpets or turn his hand towards whatever job is assigned him. LOCAL MISREPRESENTATION CONDEMN

ED. - We notice a news-letter in THE POST of April 22nd purporting to be from this locality. The author of said letter, be it known, does not live in Mara. However, that need not prevent him sending items of news from this locality. If he choose to of news from this locality. If he choose to report for this section we have no objection if he reports fairly; but when he filches the name of our quiet neighborhood as he has in that communication to escape the contempt and scorn which he knew his allusions and insinuations would arouse the case is different. He tells the readers of THE Post far and near that several of the old gentlemen of "our" neighborhood have lost their "powers of reason," as evidence their determination to "thrash" a woman. Was it his wish to provoke a newspaper discussion of the matter to which he alludes when he penned that unjust statement? Did he not see the dannewspaper discussion of the matter to which he alludes when he penned that unjust statement? Did he not see the danger of throwing such a firebrand? Tee, he did, but riaked the consequences to vent his spleen. How little he values or cares to preserve "good neighborly feeling" is easily seen. Well is it for the neighborhood along the lake shore that their old gentlemen—aye, and their young ones, too—are controlled by their powers of reason and not by a vindictive spirit such as this correspondent manifests. Gone, he says, "all the good neighborly feeling that ever existed around Mud lake." That is all nonseme, Mr. Editor. The public mind is indeed disgusted over various matters at the present time, but what of that? Does it follow therefore that neighborly feeling is destroyed? By no means. The principle on which it is based is not so perishable, thank goodness, and it is not likely to be destroyed became matters that will be little thought of twelve months bence are just now causing some agitation. Tour renders are told that a good deal of the fault rests with the "goopel chariot." Will this writer who state so cruelly tell the residers of Tex Poer just what he means by that? No, it is yile calumny, as he well knows, and he dare not do so. Moreover, who that sees and regrets the perturbation existing but knows also how much more than any one clue this individual has done to cause it. In each case he is the busybody. Inju-like, he is the disturbing face. He jumitly asserts that all good neighborly feeling that over agisted around Mud lake is gone and places a good deal of the blame elsewhere, but the community just-ly places the greater share in the right place, and of this the world outside would have remained ignorant but for this un-just impeachment of others.

LOST IN THE WOODS.-A little girl belonging to W. R. After wandering about in the bush she came out about a mile from home, took the 11th concession of Brock and went about eight miles to the town line of Mariposa, then went north to the next conceson of that township and again struck east to within a short distance of Black's school house. About eight o'clock in the evening she called at a farm house and asked for something to eat. The people took her in and made her comfortable for the night. The villagers turned out to hunt for her as soon as she was missed and after some time word was brought that she had been seen going east on the 11th concessior.
They followed up this clue and found her at the farm house after travelling about thirteen miles. She seems none the worse for her adventure.

RARE ATTRACTIONS.—Read the advt. of Mr. S. H. Metherell. It is full of good things and good bargains.

FUROR SCRIBENDI.—Apparently some of the fair damsels of Little Britain have been stricken with an intense desire for popularity, and as furor scribendi seized hem they boldly launched themselves accordingly on "A cut at Good Advice." Undoubtedly this community would have been blessed long ere this with the noble sentiments so eloquently expressed in "Cut at Good Advice" had it not been for the absence of our modern Polyhymnia vating and sanctimonious ideas expressed in the said item. But why, may I ask, did this modern Polyhymnia and the noble desperate fury on the poor benighted creature whom they assail in this their first outbreak of brilliant and talented genius. To make such a haphazard step was surey a terrible calamity to a brilliant intellect shich might otherwise have been held in purity, "Good Advice" and also "A cut at Good Advice" would prefer abler companons to young ladies on such occasions as you mention. Remember parental duties are placed before such generous offers in this enrightened age. But don't be in too much of a hurry; you may all yet meet with success. The monogram you affixed is easily solved, but perhaps if the letters arranged in the following order (M.C.M.A.

THE RAMA INDIAMS.—Mr. D. J. McPhee of Uptergrove, the Indian agent for the Rama Indian reserve, reports for 1886 as follows: "The population is stationery, the number of hirths and deaths being six respectively. Under instructions from the department I had about two hundred of the Indians successfully vaccinated. Their dwellings are clean and comfortable, and, with a few exceptions, they have enjoyed good health during the year. The crops promise a good return, and especially the potato crop, which is unusually large. The Indians have good opportunities of employment at fair wages; some of the young men receive as much as $30 per month as river drivers, others of them are employed in the mills at good wages; most of the young men fellow this made of life. Their chief cots them agend example. He does all in the power to induce the Indians to abstain from drinking and immoral habits. I have much pleasure in referring to the progress made by the children at school, under the careful tuition of Miss Battey. I regret to say that a few of the men are addicted to drinking. I have frequently called upon the hotel keepers and warned them against selling to the Indians, some of whom, when they fail to obtain it otherwise, employ unprincipled and degraded white men to procure it for them."
