BARN RAISING AND QUILTING. -The first of the season in this section took place on the farm lately purchased by Mr. G. Hoover. Our popular young carpenter, Mr. R. McTaggert, is the contractor, and is doing his work in a very creditable manner. The raising took place on Saturday afternoon.
Measrs, Gorge Hall and Charles A. Foster were chosen captains and a spirited conlest took place. What might have been a cest took pince. What might have been a serious accident happened to Fred. Shaver through a stick of equare timber rolling over his ankle, which would doubtless have resulted seriously had not the ground on which he was standing been soft and yielded to the pressure of his foot. He received a very painful bruse. The ladies who were invited to a quilting got along nicely with the work assigned them. We consider it high time our merchants conc:ded something to their employees. When a man commencing work at say seven a. m., as some of our clerks do, and leaves work at from 9.30 to 10 p.m., as all do, we think closing at seven p.m. every evening, Saturdays excepted, and three or four holidays in the year little enough latitude to get some fresh air and have some little recreation. With the co-operation of pur-chasers there is no reason why business hours should not be shorter and some time allowed the clerks. It would be healthier for merchants themselves. Then let us have a general, honest and proper observance of such holidays as the 24th now ap-

THE QUEEN'S BIRTHDAY.—With reference to the 24th we are going to have a big time here. The program is not yet quite filled, but it will be out in a few days. The meeting called for last Friday evening at Mr. Jennett's office was adjourned until Wednesday of this week on account of the band having a practice on that night, and severel members of the band being also members of the rifle association, it was considered only right they should have a say in the election of officers for the ensuing season and also in arranging the program. We understand a member of the rifle association intends presenting a silver cup to be competed for on the 24th, valued at about $25. We will give full particulars next week if possible. INCREASING TRADE.—Mesers. McMillan & Sons, our carriage builders, are more than rushing business this season. Last week they disposed of ten Al buggies and this week they are kept busy showing customers around. They have had to engage extra hands. Well, they make good work, so what can you expect?

PROGRESSING.—Beaverton is progressing slowly but surely. Two new Al residences are about being erected on Mere-et. and two on Bay-st. Others are not yet quite decided on. If some enterpr sing builder would erect about a dozen nice cottages he would not long be without tensate: Wedo not believe there is a single vacant house in Beaverton.

SPECTACLES.

It is a popular fallacy that the use of glasses should be delayed as leng as possible for fear they will become indispensible. The fact is that among civilized reading and thinking beings who have any proper appreciation of the value of time they have already become indispensable to those who can work more easily with them than without them. We have all better use for our strength than to waste it in a grammatic contest against time. it in a gymnastic contest against time, when we are sure to be losers in the end.

By working the ciliary muscle very hard we can oversome the rigidity of the lens even after it has ecased to respond to ordinary efforts. But persistence in such effort merely obliges us to close our books earlier in the day, and lose in time what cannot be made up by the satisfaction of being still independent of glasses. Weariness, neuralgia, nervous prostration, and other ills are the rewards of too great obstinary in such a course. Glasses bear stinacy in such a course. Glasses bear the same relation to civilized life as sur-face cars, carriages, and other modern con-ventances. We could get along without them. But why should we? The luxury of having them is far greater than the luxury of doing without them. We all know to much to enjoy the drudgery of putting one foot before the other by the hour; and as for reading and writing, if we have extra strength we can spend it to good advantage by increasing the number of hours with glasses rather than by increasing our labor by going without them.

It is well known that when we have have consented to yield to the claims of advancing years, we must gradually increase the strength of the glasses used until—until what? Well, that is a question which seems to have an unknown terror for some who have asked it. The answer is merely this: "Until we have reached the highest number ever used for such cases." And what then? Why, nothing; we merely keep on using it without the inconvenience of further change. But suppose even that glass ceases to be strong enough? Then we have "broken the record," as it were, and must have a stronger made, and they will be so near like the last pair that unless we tie a ribbon on them we cannot tell the two apart except by the ease with which we see through the new ones. The same cause that makes it necessary for us to wear glasses in the first place makes it necessary for us to keep up with the process and change them year by year.

Columbus to the Western world lest they should drop off the other side when they got there; but when they found the other side there was no place for them to drop off. The same mistake is made by those people who are very reluctant to change Loss—Mr. Chas. Thompson lost a valuable young horse. While working her she suddenly lost all use of one hind leg. He had her unhitched and managed to get her to the stable, when she lost all use of the other hind leg, leaving her entirely helpless, from which she subsequently died.
