What does the Peterbero Review mean toris farmers' institute. The institute is a souple of years ago for the dia opies. It numbers within its failly out most progressive and enterprisdistinction. It has taken up rest of farmers, and the movement room reformers. At the same time a few conervatives, and some conservative far who are party politicians first and always, are trying to throw cold water on the idea, but a little cold water does no harm these hot days. It is in no some a "gat" party movement; but seems to take like her cales among the farmers of all classes.

The explent Poternoro Review re At the meeting at Lindony of the so-called West Victoria farmers institute, The Post reports Mr. J. D. Naglor of Fencion born farmers present in the rooms. As THE PORT IS ITS remerks on the menting does not contest this statement, nor does dene so, we may suppose that it was ad-

"ninety-nine out of a hundred of whom "take no part in this artificial agiration." Probably half of those present were Camedian born; but what of it? Where is the point in the Review's observation. The meeting unanimously adopted a resolution in favour of reciprocity or commercial union; and according to the Review they are a disloyar, annexational crowd. Does dian-born farmers are "loyal," or that they are opposed to the movement. They are mined in its favor; and the opposition, if any, will come more from old country bern people than from native Canadians.

COMMUNICATIONS. The West Victoria Farmers In Sin.—Some of the north riding farmer feel indignant at the setion of the farmers institute for West Victoria having their meetings in Lindeay on every available opportunity. If we have a farmore institiste let it hear terrinera institute ortaine the corporation, and let the meetings go round an was agreed to. The farmers of West Victoria have staming enough among them to manage their united affairs. Why not have this second meeting somewhere else, and give farmers outside the corporation a chance to attend. The time of meeting was certainly not mid-harvest, but we were among our clover and could not attend on such about notice. The weekly papers, in which it was announced, arrived in some parts of the riding on the day of the meeting by the earliest possible mail. This is not right, Mr. Fresident, Arrange your meetings in different parts of the riding or the north yearnancy must cease to support such an institution and call such a henceficial meeting in the north riding. Yours meeting in the north riding. Yours A Young Farmer.

The New Post-Office Site,

[To the Editor of THE POST.] Sin. The recent public meeting convened by his worship the major in deference to the requiattended and heard expressed the views of many as to the most eligible site for the postffice and metom house proposed to be erected office and custom nonse proposed to be created by the Dominion government. Many spoke and many were the accusations against each who spoke. All agreed that the question was one of many were the accusations against each who spoke. All agreed that the question was one of public convenience, and not of party politics or private interest. Many were accused of having more regard for their pockets than the public. One gentleman, Mr. Mostweyn, a barrister, declared that he had no lot to sell the government not one to be made valuable by the building of a post-office is any particular place. After hearing this declaration. I immediately constitutes he would be a strong emporter of the resolution "that the question of site be submitted to the vote of the people," but to my accondenses he coloned his remarks by declaring himself in favor of the length church property and against the motion. Not satisfied with the influence of his speech and the the vote of the meeting, he new threatens the nomination on Thursday sext to obtain an injunction to prevent a poll being taken as regards the choice of a site. Mr. Merweyn, Ibelieve, leaving for his reform client, Mr. Jan. Hamilton, the owner of a valuable property is the west end of the town, opposite the English church. Many of the speakers who are opposed to the vote of the people being expressed upon a purely public master stated that the Dominion government had already parchased the Church property, and that he time had passed for the expression of the English church has been accartained from the government that the English church as the English church as the public meeting accomplimentary to the feature gentlemen who look tipon the meeting of the town onestion as the meeting of the conservatives of the two in favor of Pritton's look at the public meeting and the question, and if the church property be the choice of the people let the post-office he built upon it—which last let is nearer the centre of population and of the corporation than the people will have an opportunity of deciding this question, and if he church property be the choice of the people of the population and of the corporation than the control to the population and of the corporation
