The sloop yackt light lineage.

The source and so yet present the source of the source of the series of the party was made up principally of German and children were put about the lightery leaving the men in another boat. At seven o'clock the best started and then it was noticed that the captain also had been drinking freely. He refused to sheeten sell, and a charp squall struck the boat and threw her on her beam ends. For five minutes the yacht remained in that position, and the shrouds and bulwarks afforded some hold for the enguighed people. The struggle for a place to hold was awful. Fully half of the drowning people were children from babes in arms to six years old. The mothers made fruntic efforts to get their little once to where they could hold on to a rope or a spar and help themselves. One after another they were ewept in the tideway, and budyed by their clothing, their hands waved in frantic and unavailing appeals for help. A nagroe in a row bout saved seven lives, and the Dean picked up all that were alive when she reached the spot. It is thought twenty-seven lives have been lest. Twenty-two bodies have been recovered.

-The London correspondent of the Montreal Star cabled on Friday: Last night's scene and its conclusion were really victories for the opposition. Lord Randolph Churchill took the course I predicted he would. With elaborate affectation of friendliness for the government he proceeded to destroy the bill [the Irish land bill] under consideration. The government friendlinese for the government he proceeded to destroy the bill [the Irish land they would drop the bankkruptcy clauses and close the door of objection by civil process, which they had left open to the landiords. Mesers. Parnell and Gladstone, therefore, thought it best to drop the amendment against the second reading and to concentrate their attention on the committee stage. At this stage the government are, I believe, divided, just as they were hopelesely discomfitted last night by Lord Randolph Churchill's sudacions treatment of their measure. Lord Salisbury is for the landlords, while one or two progressive members of the cabinet are for a real tenant bill. The opposition have now the ball at their feet. They can, with the help of the unionists, who, though not quite inganuous in their opposition, are still prepared to go some way with the Gladstonians and shape the bill in almost suy form they please. Lord Randolph Churchill, it has been noticed, went a good deal further than Mr. Chamberlain did in trampling on the measure. There is a belife and disapproves of the turn affairs

A great sensation was created Saturday week last at Allenford, Bruce county, by the cold-blooded murder of Mrs. Mc-Dougall, widow of the late Archibald Mc-Dougall, The murder was committed about two p.m. by a man by the name of Hughes, a neighbor. Two bullets entered her right breast, causing death almost instantly. Hughes shot himself, but not fatally. He is now lodged in Walkerton gaot. The verdict of the coroner's jury is: "Fremeditated murder by Hughes." Jeacusly is said to have been the cause.

—Judge Slean of Galcouda, Ill., was cutting weeds near his house the other evening and cut the head off a big rattlesnake. The same blow threw the snake into the air and it fell upon the judge's neck, about which it coiled with a convulsive grasp, at the same time keeping up its ominous rattle. A colored man pulled the body off the frightened judge and assisted him to the house, where it was some time before he could convince himself that the blood which was smeared on his face from the body of the snake was not the result of a wound.

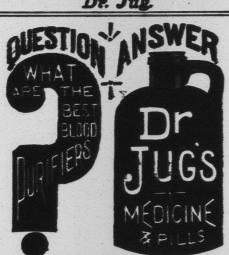

The New York Tribune tells of a man in Frankfort, Ky., who swallowed shot in order to cure aethma. It is no wonder that people who may be afflicted in that way will try anything that may be sold as beneficial. Here is a simple plan that we know cure a man when his life was a burden to him and a good night's reet unknown: He pulverized saltpetre and mixed it with an equal part of coarse brown sugar. When the spasms came on he placed the mixture on a pan, placed live coals on it and inhaled the fumes. In less than a month he was perfectly cured, and though that was years ago he has never had a return of the complaint. The world is welcome to this information, for the absolute truth of which we can youck.—[London Advertiser.
