Famous Doctor

Once said that the secret of good health consisted in keeping the head cool, the feet warm, and the bowels open. Had this eminent physician lived in our day, and known the merits of Ayer's Pills as an aperient, he would certainly have recommended them, as so many of his distinguished successors are doing. The celebrated Dr. Farnsworth, of Norwich, Conn., recommends Ayer's Pills as the best of all remedies for "Intermittent Fevers."

Dr. I. E. Fowler, of Bridgeport, Conn., says: "Ayer's Pills are highly and universally spoken of by the people about here. I make daily use of them in my practice."

Dr. Mayhew, of New Bedford, Mass., says: "Having prescribed many thousands of Ayer's Pills, in my practice, I can unhesitatingly pronounce them the best cathartic in use."

The Massachusetts State Assayer, Dr. A. A. Hayes, certifies: "I have made a careful analysis of Ayer's Pills. They contain the active principles of well-known drugs, isolated from inert matter, which plan is, chemically speaking, of great importance to their usefulness. It insures activity, certainty, and uni-tormity of effect. Ayer's Pills contain no metallic or mineral substance, but the virtues of vegetable remedies in skillful combination."

—A San Remo despatch of Saturday says: Emperor Frederick passed a good night. He feels extremely well. He drove to the station at 9 o'clock Saturday morning, accompanied by the Empress Victoria, to take the special train in waiting to convey him to Berlin. The largest crowd ever seen in San Remo gathered to withese his departure. The new emperor was enthusiastically cheered by the crowd, and he repeatedly bowed his acknowledgments of their greetings. ... A Sunday despatch from Rome says: King Humbert travelled from Rome says: King Humbert travelled from Rome to San Pier d'Arena to meet Emperor Frederick. When the train reached the station King Humbert entered the coach occupied by the emperor and embraced him. The scene at their meeting was a touching one. The emperor was voiceless owing to his disease, but he wrote many notes, in one of which he expressed his thankfulness for the honor and respect paid his father and himself. Empress Victoria translated to King Humbert the signs made by the emperor and conversed with the king in French. The emperor was suffering from fatigue, but otherwise he was in a normal condition. His throat was closely mufiled, and he wore a hooded capand heavy surtout. The silent parting between the two rulers was affecting. King Humbert's aults were impressed with the emperor's comparative robustness. During the interview with King Humbert the emperor says he hopes to show himself equal to the work before him, and thanks the Italian government for helping Prince Bismarck in his present trials. Since parting with him King Humbert has wired to Berlin that the emperor looks surprisingly well.

-The Springfield Republican, a paper not given to sensational stories, prints the following, which is strange if true: "The romance of Emperor William's remarkable life began with his very infancy. The strict law of heridity which controls all the relations of dynastic families makes no provision for twins. Hence twins are not allowed. But nature is equal and ever So twins are sometimes born in the direct line to thrones, though history is as mum as the grave about them. Thus it happened to Frederick William III of Prussis ed to Frederick William III of Prussia that his wife bore him twin sons, March 22, 1797. It was a characteristic stroke of fortune for this most unlucky monarch, being of all things the one piece of luck which was bad form in a royal palace. The high chamberlains of his most punctilious court were aghast at such a dangerous and unheard of proceeding in the Hohenzollern line. To be sure, there was an older son, and little apparent likelihood that one of these twins would ever come to the lern line. To be sure, there was an older son, and little apparent likelihood that one of these twins would ever come to the throne, but if the succession should ever be open to them, who should decide which was which? So prompt measures were taken. There were the two bits of babies just alike. One was kept for a prince of Hohenzollern; the other was given to a discreet German nobleman to bring up as a gentleman of good family and mysterious origin. One prince went on to be the greatest monarch of continental Europe. The other became a staid German squire, his daughter married and migrated to Ohlo, and his grandson is a well-known professor of music in the city of New York, not a little reaembling his cousin, the present afflicted crown prince of Germany. Our readers will look for this story in vain in the histories, but it is truer than history, and the Emperor William, whose death is now announced, acknowledged the relationship in letters of his own hand, addressed to his niece in Ohlo, then herself an elderly woman, who had with some difficulty solved the riddle of her father's origin."

QUESTIONS IN PARLIAMENT. Pension to Min Goodillack

[From Hamisrik]
In the house of community on the 2nd Musch, Mr. BARROW ashed: -Dook the government intend to pay Mrs. Gowanlock, the widow of Mr. Gowanick who was killed by Indians at Frog Lake dur-was killed by Indians at Frog Lake during the late Northwest rebellion, a pension in the same extent as that paid to Mrs. Delaney?

How. Mr. Whith seid: -Mrs. Gowan-lock's husband was not an employee of the Indian department; while Mrs. Delaney's was. The former was at the time of the outbreak building a mill in partnership with Mr. Laurie at Battleford. The department had paid them part of a bonus in advance, and was to have paid the balance on the completion of the mill, but the mill was never completed. Mr. Delaney held the position of farm insignific at Frog lake at the time of the massacre, and it was on this account his widow received the pension. I may say further that Mrs. Gowaniock has received for personal losses from the department of the interior, under the rebellion losses commission, $807, and that the firm of which Mr. Gowaniock was a member received $4,202, one-half of which went, I believe, to the Gowaniock estate.

Mr. Barron asked:-Have the government yet filled the office of postmaster at Bexley post office? If so, who has been

Hon. Mr. McLELAN: -The office has not yet been filled, but I have given instructions to have it filled.

The Trent Valley Canal Commission The Way the Government fulfil their In the commons on the 5th March, Mr. BARRON moved for: -"Return of copies of all correspondence between the govern-ment of Canada and the commissioners appointed by the government to take evidence and acquire information relative to the Trent Valley canal, and the further the Trent Valley canal, and the further progress thereof; of copies of all instructions authorising the commissioners to act in the premises, and defining their powers and authority and mode of procedure; and of a copy of any and all reports of the engineer or engineers in charge of the works of said canal, made to the government since the last session of this parliament." Mr. Barron said:—I make this motion because I believe it will be greatly in the public interest, and especially in the interest of the propie living along the route of the Trent Valley canal, that these papers should be brought down at an early a date as possible. The sovernment of Canada has thought fit to appoint a Trent Valley canal commission, for what purpose we do not yet know, and I desire to inform the members of that government that the appointment of this commission has created in the minds of the public a feeling of want of confidence in the government's sincerity regarding the procecution of that work. At this stage I do not intend to attack the government for appointing that commission. Perhaps at a later time I may have an opportunity to do so if I think right and proper. But I think it was perhaps a very unwise step to appoint it, for the reason that the government has promised time and time again that the work should be gone on with as rapidly as possible, and the appointment has given the impression through out the country that the government does not intend to go on with it. I need not remind the house of the promises made by the different members of the government. I shall not remind it of the visit of the hon. minister of finance to the district, and of the impression he left upon the minds progress thereof; of copies of all instruc-I shall not remind it of the visit of the hon. minister of finance to the district, and of the impression he left upon the minds of the people that that great work, second only to our railway system, should be gone with as speedily as possible. Perhaps I may remind the house that the minister of public works, whom I see in his seat, himself promised to the member for East Peterboro, just prior to the last election, not only that the work should be speedily proceeded with to its completion, but that there should be work gone on with between the town of Peterboro and the village of Lakefield. Therefore, I think we have a right to ask the Government to go on with this work as speedily early completion of that great work that, so far as I can do so with my feeble ability and voice. I shall be always ready and willing to assist the government in carrying it forward. But there is one difficulty felt by the people along the reute of the canal. The general impression among them is that though the commission has been appointed it has now powers; and we wish to have the papers laid on the table in order to see whether they have any specific powers to obtain evidence, and the mode in which they are are going to proceed. So little confidence have the people in the powers of the commission, that they themselves have been compelled to subscribe large sums of money to procure evidence which I suppose was before the government when they saw fit to make promises as to proceeding with the work. If the government will allow me to make a suggestion, I think it is only right and proper that they should express their willingness to pay the expenses of the different witnesses who may be brought before the commission. It may be that many witnesses would be brought before it who would give unimportant evidence, but that difficulty would be easily got over by the government only paying the expenses of such witnesses as the Commission should certify to be necessary and material witnesses, or to have given necessary possible.

Sir Hector Langevin said:—I was not

Sir Hector Langevin said:—I was not exactly listening to the hon, gentleman, as the matter refers to the department of my hon, friend the minister of railways and canals, but my attention was called to the speech of the hon, gentleman by one of my colleagues, because the hon, gentleman said that the minister of public works had made certain promises to this house. I think he must have meant the minister of railways if any promises were made, because I am not aware of having made any promise or of having spoken of this enquiry to anyone except my colleagues in council. Therefore I am not in a pocition to answer the hon, gentleman, and my colleague being absent, he cannot answer. No doubt, when he sees the hon, gentleman, he will be able to reply for himself, and I do notese a ny objection to granting the address asked for.

Mr. Barron:—I of course endesvor to be very accurate, and if I have made any mistake it is not mine, but that of the hon, member for West Peterboro, because, on the evening of his election, that hon, gentleman is reported in the government organ of that locality as having said:—"The minister of public works had given him every accurance that the Trant Valley contract between Peterboro and Lakefield would be let during the coming summer. This was no electionering dodge, because the elections were now all ever." The elections were now all ever." The elections were now all ever. The hon, gentleman will please change "public works" into "reflexes and canale," then he will have an answer from my colleague.
