—The Farmers' Advocate for July gives some interesting notes of Captain Rolph's farm in Markham that are interesting and suggestive. He has fifteen milking Jersey cows, which gave him last yesr $112.50 each. His practice is to send the cream daily to Toronto, where it sells for one dollar per gallon. The price paid at Oakland's auction for a new bull this summer was $2,210. The surrounding farmers frequently take advantage of a Jersey cross, but are unable to keep their grades, as city buyers pick them up as soon as they come in milk at from $50 to $100 each. Holstein cows, always good for milk, are now coming to excel in butter, and often yield from ten to twenty-five pounds a week.

Davidson, who is a tanner by trade and not in any way connected with the liquor business except as a consumer, was summoned for violating the Scott act. From the evidence it appears that Mrs. Hamill had given him a bottle and fourteen cents to get some whiskey for her, she claiming that she was ill. Davidson supplied her from some stock he had on hand for private consumption. After a lengthy and amusing cross-examination he admitted having taken the 14 cents, and his worship construed this to be a violation of the Scett act and fined him $50 and costs.

The London Standard says it believes -The London Standard says it believes

The London Standard says it believes the government has prepared the names of the judges to constituts the commission asked for by Mr. Parnell on Monday. The government will not agree to any change. Communications are said to be passing between the government and the opposition, with a view to arriving at an agreement in regard to the limitation of the enquiry. The government is indisposed to omit a purase in the bill, and will not substitute the names of other persons....Mr. Smalley, the tory correspondent of the New York Tribune, telegraphs: The Parnell commission bill is an open door through which anybody and anything may walk. Perhaps no commission ever sat with such large powers. Lawyers are already suggesting that the judges who are to compose the commission may themselves object to the scope of the enquiry. Roughly speaking, whatever the attorney-general alleged in his speech in O'Dennell against Walter may be enquired into, whether it affects Mr. Parnell or any other member of parliament or any outsider. Everything in the Times pamphlet, "Parnellsm and Crime," may be enquired into, because that pamphlet was read by the attorney-general. Anything referred to in the course of the proceedings in that trial may be inquired into. Witnesses are compellable to attend and are to be examined and cross-examined by as many counsel as the judges choose. All documents must be produced. Everybody implicated may have counsel; if Mr. Egan comes over he may have counsel; if Mr. Egan comes over he may have counsel if he does nor made defendant in a civil suit on account of his evidence. This certainly goes far beyond Mr. Parnell's expectation, but at present his attitude is one of uncertainty.

-A Dublin cable says: JAn inquest was begun Tuesday at Mitchellstown into the death of Mr. Mandeville, who is said to have died from the results of the treatment received in Tallamore jail. The widow of the deceased testified that her husband had suffered with a sore throat throughout his imprisonment. He was unable to swallow and had suffered terribly from hungar. The prison doctor had failed to relieve him, and had certified that he was in a fit condition to receive punishment. A great sensation was caused at the Mandeville inquest Friday by the evidence of Daniel Goulding, who was formerly a warden in Tullamore gaol. Goulding deposed that on the evening of Nov. 22nd the governor of the gaol said that he had received orders to strip Mr. Mandeville, that he (witness) and the other five wardens entered the prisoner's cell and found him sleeping soundly, that they shook him rudely and aroused him, that Mr. Mandeville resisted but was stripped naked, in which condition he remained during the night. Witness said he was aware that Mr. Mandeville had been punished for periods never before recorded. The inquest was adjourned. The inquest on the body of Dr. James Riddley, the medical attendant at Tullamore gaol, who hilled himself rather that give testimony as to the treatment received by Mr. Mandeville, has been adjourned until Friday next. The utmost interest attaches to the case, and particularly to the papers of the deceased, which were sained by the coroner. These widow of the deceased testified that her

—Mr. John Moriey, in an address at the opening of the Morpeth liberal club Saturday, denounced esercion indischand and said that he was told on authority that the Parnell investigating committee would have a good year's steady work before it. He wondered whether the public realised that fact. He did not believe that the country desired that the charges against Mr. Parnell should be m'xed up with those against thirty or forty other persons. If the commission bill was passed as it now stood there was a possibility of opening the way for accusations against any number of persons in Ireland through the disclosures that might be made. The commission would cause more confusion, ill-will and anarchy than he cared to contemplate. Whatever was the result, it ought not to alter their determination to do justice to Ireland. Even if it should be proved that the national league was in some respects a criminal organization, they had the terrible damaging fact that such an organization was needed to open the eyes of England to the wrongs of Ireland and to force parliament to rescue tenants from the grasp of the rack renter and the oppressor.

—Senator Oglivis, who has just returned from a trip to the Pacific coast, says: "The crops from the boundaries of Manitoba to the west, where they have usually been short, are simply splendid, and better I never saw. I saw wheat in the ear standing four feet high, and as thick as it could stand for hundreds of acres. The farmers have usually complained of drought, but this year there has been plenty of rain, if not to much, but the appearance of the crops is totally beyond anything I ever dreamed of, and I was always a hopeful man of Manitoba.

—A London cable says: The Mandeville inquest brings out some awkward facts, whether his treatment by the prison authorities caused or hastened his death may be an open question, but he was treated, it is clear, with hardness, though not with more hardness than other refractory prisoners. Mr. Gladstone refers to it as one of the most shocking, one of the most revolting cases that has occurred, and he repeats that the discipline to which members of parliament have been subjected in prison cannot be called less than brutal.

—A study of the clauses in the English local government bill relating to the changes in the method of granting liquor licenses, and the compensation to be allowed in cases where such licenses should be refused, serves to show that there was a strong foundation for the public sentiment which compelled the government to abandon the proposed scheme. In England, from the time of Edward VI., when licenses were first granted, they have never been looked upon as personal favors granted to any man, but as legal limitations and precautions taken against the trade. They created no personal claim beyond the letter of the license; no vested interest for the holder of the license, and, above all, no local privilege in the house where he carried on his trade. The compensation clauses, therefore, of the local government bill virtually in the local govern lege in the house where he carried on his trade. The compensation clauses, therefore, of the local government bill virtually created a new law, and that by indirect action. A statement drawn up in opposition to the clauses, based on careful enquiries, showed that a house which had been built at a cost of $4,000, and which had been granted a license was sold for $30,500. If the license had been withdrawn under the new Bill the compensation would been fixed at $27,500. Another house with a license, worth $10,000, was bought by a brewer for $52,500, and the compensation would have been $42,500. The calculation was that the bill would have endowed and protected the drink trade at a cost of $1,250,060,000. This compensation would have gone not only to publicans but also to brewers, and even still more to ground landlords. The government surely could not have foreseen and rightly weighed the consequences of these clauses in the local bill.

The disposition of official circles toward a disbelief that the interviews have determined anything. The immediate effect has been to lessen the strain of the relations between the Berlin and St. Petersburg foreign offices, but it is noteworthy that while M. de Giers and Count Herbert Bismark exchapte confidences at Peterhol the North German Gazette on Thursday denouncing pan Siavism as a menace to the peace of Europe was worthy of the warmest peried of the anti-Russian campaign. It checked operations in the bourse and caused a slight fall in roubles. The obvious aim was to show that the policy of Prince Bismark is not changed by the courtesy of the visit of Emperor William to the Czar. The Cologne Gazette and freeze the interview as simply a friendly manifestation toward the Czar, implying no deviation from German projects or a sacrifice of German interests. The Cologne Gazette explicitly denies that any special question has been resolved at Peterhof, or that anything has been done affecting existing treaties. Diplomatic circles are convinced to the same effect and regard the interview with indifference. Emperor William's tour of the leading courts of Europe is certainly in the interest of peace for the time being, prolonging as it does the period of truce; but it is now recognized as a purely social function, the new monarch paying his first visit to the heads of states with whom he desire to cultivate amity.
