CHARLES D. BARR, . . PROPRIETOR THE "GLORIOUS TWELFTH." GRAND CELEBRATION AT LINDSAY.

The Largest and Most Enthusiastic De-menstration Ever Held in the Dis-trict-Grand Master Wallace's Ad-dress - Barron and the East Ward Arch.

The celebration at Lindsay of the anniversary of the battle of the Boyne was the largest and most successful ever held in he district, and one of the finest seen in the province. There came to town not only the lodges of the vicinity, but many from the district ranging from Port Hope and Peterboro on one side to Midland and Orillia on the other. Two special trains from Port Hope and two from Peterboro were required; and the trains from Port Perry, Orillia, Coboconk and Haliburton, with those on the main line, were not only of great length but the cars were crowded far beyond "their utmost capacity." The result was a gathering not surpassed in numbers by anything in the past, with the exception of the grand reform demonstration of some years ago; and it proved once more the fine natural position of Lindsay as a the fine natural position of Lindsay as a railway and river centre for a great popular gathering. The town was handsomely decorated for the occasion. There was a profuse display of flags and bunting. Three fine arches on the main street and one in the east ward, bearing appropriate mottoes and maxims, bore testimony to the public spirit and enthusiasm of the local brethren. On the East ward arch was inscribed

"NO SUBRENDER"

BARRON AND THE NOBLE THIRTEEN. BARRON AND THE NOBLE THIRTEEN.

This inscription, though it was heartly approved by everybody else, for some inscrutable reason gave great annoyance to the marshal of the day (Mr. S. Hughee) and resulted in an unpleasant snub to that individual and noble display of enthusiasm for Barron, as will be related further on in this report. The visiting iodges were welcomed at the trains and boats, and escorted up town, the drums beating, fifes playing, and banners flying, making the liveliest possible scenes. Several brass bands were in the procession and contributed their quota to the music of the day.

The procession marched through the principal streets and then broke up for linner. Preparations on the most extensive scale had been made by all the hotels, sive scale had been made by all the hotels, but the crowd was so great that it was impossible to get through with this necessary, part of the program without some delay. Almost everybody succeeded in getting a good square meal, and the next order was to reach the agricultural grounds for the speaches.

Another great procession was formed with this object in view and in due course the crowds reached their destination. The procession was most creditable in every respect.

A FISHING HOLIDAY WAY

From Wall Street to Gull River—Big Mud Turtle Lake-Better than the Pali-sades of the Endson-Beauties of Base Fishing-The Attractions of Postage-

DAYTON'S ISLAND CAMP, GULL LAKE, CANADA, July 8th, 1889.

Here we are in camp, and a jolly, content lot of mortals we are. Our party consists of six able-bodied man, Mr. Knowlson, his son "Bill" and Mr. Hopkins of Lindsay, a Mr. Gordon of Bowmanville and Mr. Dayton and self of New York. Our camp is most delightfully and romantically located on a small island in this, the prettiest lake of the series that stretches all through this part of the country. The island is about 150 feet wide and 350 feet long. It is of a rocky formation and therefore the trees are not as high as on the mainland and the large surrounding islands. Our tent is only ten or fif-teen feet from the water, and fishing grounds for bass and salmon trout are within short distances of our camp. We are thus in comfortable reach of sport, and as our quarters are of the best we have nothing to wish for. I will not dilate too much upon the camp right here, because one camp is pretty much like another and it is only the occurrences that make it so individually charming to those who camp out. I will, however, refer to it as things of interest occur to me.

We left Lindsay at six o'clock last Friday evening on the Midland Road, and after a long and tedious ride arrived at a "way back" town called Coboconk at ten o'clock. Here we unloaded our canoes, baggage, provisions, guns and fishing tackle, and by the light of the new moon distributed the load in the four canoes and began our paddle northward.

THE GULL RIVER. The first waterway we struck was a section of the Gull river—a river that is spread over many miles of country, but covering little space itself as it is divided up by dozens of lakes varying in length from seven miles to one-half mile. The river is only 300 to 350 feet wide and being densely wooded on both sides presents a charm. ing view, particularly so in the weird semiing view, particularly so in the weird semi. illumination of the young moon. We proceeded up the placid stream a little over two miles when a sharp turn to the right brought us to the rapids that shoot out of Little Yud Turtle lake. Fifty or more strong dips of the paddle carried us through them and out into the first lake we encountered. It was now well on to midnight and we decided to go no further until morning. We found a suitable place on the shore of the lake and camped for the night. After an early breakfast Dayton, Mr. Knowlson and myself took time for a bass fish while the rest made ready to resume the trip. Dayton was the fortunate man to land the first fish of the expedition and a good one it was.

the expedition and a good one it was. SHOOTING A 'LUNGE. But it was left to Knowlson to give us a little excitement, and he did it in this wise. He had nooked a fair sized bass and was scientifically playing him, when suddenly he felt a tremendous tug at his line and the way his reel made music for a few moments would make Gilmore die of shame and mortification. A whirl in the water near the bow of my cance revealed to me the cause of the disturbance. A giant 'lunge had fastened his ugly teeth half way up the base's back and was hanging on as tightly as a postage stamp to a dunning letter. I saw at once that the lunge could never be landed with that hold, so I called to the boys at the camp (a hundred yards away) to come on with the rifle. Young Knowison was out in his cance in a moment and the next time the fish showed himself at the surface of the water bang went the rifle and 21 bs. were added to our load, for we had no time to stop and dress the monster.

THE PALISADES. At nine o'clock Saturday morning we were off again, and, as we had twelve or more miles of heavy paddling and half a dezen exhausting portages to make, we took things quietly and enjoyed the magnificent scenery we passed through. It is next to impossible to describe the beauty of this part of the country, and only the beauty of this part of the country, and only those who have passed through it can form any conception of it. As one travels north the sandy and scrubby nature of the banks gradually gives way to stony formations, and by the time our camping grounds are reached high bluffs of solid granite line the borders of the lake, rivaling in grandeur the famous Palisades on the Hudson at New York. But I am anticipating, and will "keep to my course," as Mr. Knowlson would put it.

BIG MUD TURTLE LAKE.

At the head of Little Mud Turtle we encountered another rapids, shorter but uglier than the first, and by the time we had bucked through them Dayton and I (the portly members of the parts) had each reduced our weight considerably. Another half mile stretch of narrow water and we are out on Big Mud Turtle lake. This lake is something over three miles long and in parts is very wide. Fishing is good there, 'tis said, but we didn't stop to find out for ourselves. We kept right on, for the sun was getting hotter than a mustard plaster on raw flesh and we wanted to reach Norland at the head of the lake as soon as possible. We reached there a little before noon, and as we had to make our first portage there we hauled our stuff ashore at the side of the log slide and prepared our dinner beneath the trees and right along side of the most satisfying and exhiberating spring that every greeted weary traveller. A little rest and we were on the go once more. Our boxes, bags cances, etc., had to be carried up and over the steep hill and placed in the water again above the dam. But this portage only gave us a taste of what was to come. A little above Norland a natural stone dam confronted us, and here, although the fall of water is less than five feet, every cunce of our stuff had to be lifted over. water and we are out on Big Mud Turtle lake.

ACQUIRING VALUABLE EXPERIENCE. Here it was that one of our party, who had had but little experience with small cances, acquired a little knowledge that will be of value to him for the rest of this trip at least. I will not mention his name, as he is rather sensitive on the subject. One of the light canoes had been placed in the water, when our friend stepped into it it as he would into a row boat, with the natural result that he got his back teeth wet. It was a singular coincidence that his happened at the very spot where a yearago young Knowlson dropped a valuable gold watch. Our diver did not recover the watch, however, I am sorry to say, so the story cannot be wound up in story book fashioh. We wrung our aquatic friend out and proceeded. A mile further an Elliot's Falls stopped our onward course, and here the hardest job of the trip was done. Imagine an almost perpendicular wall fifteen feet high, over which four big canoes and heavy luggage must be carried, and a fair idea of the work may be had. This portage brought us to another piece of river about four miles long, and then after crossing M ore's lake (one and a half miles long) we came to placed in the water, when our friend stepped of the journey at a place that rejoices in the simple name of "Leary's." A log slide, two or three houses and a little store constitute the architectural beauties of the village, and the man after whom it was named is a red whiskered potentate of no mean order. He said we could buy anything we wanted at his store, but when we asked for potatoes he was sorry there were none, and he could not give us any ice because he had neglected to store any last winter. Hominy he had never heard of, and he asked if base-ball was played with "keerda." This was too much for us and we got away from the place before doing any damage. The portage there brought us to the foot of Gull lake and we were not sorry to be near the end of our journey. The lake, as I intimated before, is full of islands, and the water is therefore divided into dozene of channels, with high cliffs marking them off as a rule, a shallow strip now and then intervening where the islands are low, such as the one on which we are camping. uld buy anything we wanted at his store, but DATTON'S ISLAND.

PAYTON'S HEARD.

(named after one of our party), is three miles up from the end of the lake, and is separated from the mainland by only one hundred yards of water. Larger islands are to the south, west and north of us, and we are well sheltered on all sides. Our little strip of water opposite the camp is comparatively shallow, and it therefore good ground for black hase. We have had now and aport with this kind of the, but the milman trout are the boys to put a man's nerves on strings and make his eyes stand out like teacure. We have a great place for the spotted darlings, and, although cramped for room, manage to land our prises in fine shape. We fish from the side of one of the adjacent islands with a perpendicular wall of rock, seventy feet high at our back, and a ledge only five feet wide and not more than a dozen long to stand on. The water at our feet is more than fifty feet deep, and a plumb line held at arm's length would go right to the bottom without striking any obstruction. We drop our lines to within a few feet of of the bottom, using live minnows for bait. Then we feel a little jerk on the line, such as a minnow make in challow water. We think we have a little fish on and begin to reel in. But it is soon apparent that the great weight of water has deluded us, for as the fish gets nearer to the surface he gains in strength and that tail of his begins to get in its great licks. Then you believe that you've got something worth while. Your pole doubles up almost end to end, and your line swisshes abeut like the tail and side plaits of a directoire costupe in a gale of wind. The trout run all the way from three to fourteen and fifteen pounds, and when one of the latter size is struck on an eight ounce rod it is more sport than chewing tutti-fruti by a good deal. I had one last night that I had to play over three quarters of an hour, and when we hung him on the scales he pulled the indicator down to 10½ lies. When landed he was cold as ice and his flesh was as firm and hard as a rock. [Oh, Archie, how fortunate it was that George Washington encountered a cherry tree instead of big trout.—ED. Post.] Our fishing is not altogether confined to the rod and reel, however. We use a wholesale means of capturing the trout, which although being very unsportsmanlike is effective. We set what is termed a night line. A long stout trolling line about 500 feet long is used for the pur,ose. One end is fastened to the share, and then about 150 feet

Base Ball Notes. -Lindsay plays Stouffville on Thursday next.

The game will be called at 4 p.m., and no doubt will be interesting. The battery for the bank clerks will be Montgomery and Hill. The lawyers have not selected their battery yet. Admission, 10c. Ladies will be admitted free. There will no doubt be a large attendance.

An interesting game of hear hall was placed.

—An interesting game of base-ball was played on the 12th instant between the Lindsays and Orillias, resulting in favor of the former by a score of 23 to 12. There was a very fair attendance. A home-run by R binson was one of the "strking" features of the game. Following is the score:

Civdesdale Exportation

The following, taken from the Edinburgh North British Agriculturist, referring as it does to an enterprising horseman well known in this district, will be read with interest: "The exporting season of 1829 has begun in good earnest, upwards of forty head of pedigreed horses having left the Clyde for the United States and Canada during the last few days. The total number exported since January lat is quite equal to the number exported during the corresponding period of the previous year. Half a dozen of those exported lately go to Winnipeg and are the property of Messre. J. & A. Mc-Hattie, Aberdeen. Mr. Joseph Vance, Hamburg, Ont., purchased four well-bred borses from Mr. C. Lawson, Mains of Cults, which left the Clyde on Friday. Eight animals of approved breeding and good quality were shipped by Mr. Gilmour to Toronto at the same time. A first-class selection of eight well-bred horses was made by Mr. Tolbert W. Evans, Yelverton, Ont., from the stude of Mr. Walter Park, Hatton, and Mr. Arthur Lang, Gurneyland, Paisley. Amongst these were two capital colts purchased from Mr. Lang, one of which was third at Barrhead, fifth at Maryhill and fifth at Paisley, and both of which are well colored, highly-bred animals, calculated to improve the native stock of Canada. Amongst those purchased from Mr. Park were several promising animals got by Sir Hildebrand [4024], which was first at the Royal to an enterprising horseman well known in this of Canada. Amongst those purchased from Mr. Park were several promising animals got by Sir Hildebrand [4024], which was first at the Royal in 1886, and Jordanshaw [3343], the premium Kinross horse of this season. An outstanding filly in this lot was Paisley Gem, a beautiful yearling filly which gained first prize in the Derby at Paisley last Thursday. This filly was bred by Mr. Love, Margaret's Mill, Kilmalcolm, and got by Jordanshaw out of the mare Miss Lawrence, which in 1884 stood second at Glasgow summer show. Mr. Evans's shipment last year was one of the best that left Scotland, and the farmers of Canada have appreciated the service rendered by the importation of a better class of animals. Several of them were winners at shows in autumn and all of them have been sold to good advantage."

PORTER & Cc., Orillia, want five thousand pounds of first-class yellow roll or crock butter, and any quantity of eggs, for which they will pay the highest price in Orillia, either in cash or trade. Remember you have a big advantage in trading your butter and eggs out with them. They give you the goods the same as if you paid cash; they give them to you at wholesale prices; and they guarantee to saved you at least one dollar in every five you spend at their store. Don't forget they have no two prices.—53-1.

RUMOR CONTRADICTED. -Referring to the recent death of William H. Weir, of Emily, and the rumor that he committed Emily, and the rumor that he committed suicide because his suit was rejected by a young lady of Omemee, a friend of both families says:—The young lady states that she and the deceased were on the very best of terms, and flatly denies any rejection on her part. She and Mr. Weir were together the evening previous to his death, and there was an ergagement for the following Sunday evening. Besides the deceased was in his usual good health and spirits ten minutes before his death and spirits ten minutes before his death.

There are no circumstances connected with this sad affair to lead to presumption

CANNINGTON

'Correspondence of The Post.!

PERSONAL.—Miss Meta Chambers of Napanee is at present visiting her aunt, Mrs.
Dr. Hart.....Mr. John Holmes of Toronto is spending his vacation at Canniagton.

DELAYED MAIL.—Twice in the last two weeks the morning mail from Toronto to Cannington has been dropped off at Sunderland and we have been forced to wait until evening to get our morning papers etc. Whose fault is it?

THE BUSY BURGLAR.—A rumour reached our town a few days ago that a couple of suspicious characters after prowling around Beaverton for a few days and finding no rest for the soles of their feet had started for Cannington. Our merchants with their usual enterprise engaged a night watch, and if the light-fingered gentry appear we may expect to hear of somebody heige hairs.

engaged a night watch, and if the light-fingered gentry appear we may expect to hear of somebody being hurt.

LOCAL IMPROVEMENTS.—Progress seems to be the watchword of our village fathers. Long stretches of new sidewalk are being put down; streets are being gravelled; prospects for electric light for the town are bright; and a granger from away back has been fined for tying his horse to a shade tree on the street.

The Glorious Twelfth.—The brethren of Cannington L. O. L spent the day in Sunderland.

Civic Holiday. - Wednesday, 24th inst., has been proclaimed a holiday, and all loyal subjects of her gracious majesty in Cannington are requested to observe it as such. The Sunday schools of the various churches will picnic at Beaverton that day, RACES.—Thursday and Friday of this week the summer meeting will be held on the race course here. $900 will be offered in prizes and as a large number of horses are entered a big time is expected.

TEA MEETING.—When I wrote my first to give all particulars, therefore I think it will do to refer to it again. The total pro-ceeds of tea and of the social Wednesday following was $153. This I think was very good for a country sathering of the kind. I notice some correspondent of the P. P. Standard "puts his foot in it" by giving the committee unreasonable praise. I do not think it wise to make such com-parisons as are implied in his remarks; but since the invidious distinction has been made I will say that while every one admits that this committee did their work well, yet but few would dare assert that had done any more work or better work than committees of former years. If the truth must be to'd they have done less, for each year the arrangement; have been more perfect and things are now in such a shape that it is a comparatively easy matter to get up a rea. For the perfection of arrangements the committees of former years are entirely to be credited for they accomplished it in spite of much prejudice and some unreasonable opposition. In ne way can the unusual attendance and the greater than ordinary ceipts be credited to the committee for they made no special effort or introduced no special feature; but simply reaped as the result of their labors the effect of a concatenation of circums'ances - some more and some less recent - ver which they had no control. It so happened that the majority of the committee this year were of one set and it is supposed that the Standard correspondent is tacked on somewhere about their clothes and wrote as a hound goes—by scent.

BEE-KEEPING.—Mr. Alex. Black, postmaster here, has within the last two years turned his attention to bee-keeping. He is proving very successful and has this year added largely to his stock and plant. As he is a man of sound education and intelligence and takes a deep interest in the work he is likely soon to attain a prominent position amongst the bee keepers of BETHANY.

Correspondence of The Post. THE BOYNE ANNIVERSARY .- The glorious 12th was celebrated here by the Orangemen of Manvers township. For several days our loyal citizens united in adorning our village for the calebration. The main streets were beautifully decorated with arches and double arches of evergreens. Over these the flags were holsted. Early in the morning our two lodges were equipped and ready to welcome their brethren from Pontypooi, Purple Hill, Ballyduff and Fallis Corners. These lodges formed in procession near the railway station and marched through the principal streets headed by our brass band, which played well for the little practice they have had, thanks to Mr. A. Staples, for his untiring patience in working up a band here from raw material for the celebration. They then adjourned for dinner band here from raw material for the celebration. They then adjourned for dinner and proceeded to Mr. F. Hamilton's, where ample preparations were made and all were well served with a first-class meal.
After dinner they again formed into line and marched to the drill shed where speeches were delivered by the Rev. Mr.
Burns and Rev. Rural Dean Allen of Millbrook. Rev. Mr. Bell, Rev. Mr. Johnston and Dr. Brereton. Mr. James Clarke filled the chair in patriotic style and also delivered quite a speech. James is as loyal as he is brave. The speakers were all heartly applauded for their loyal addresses. After the speeches all retired to their homes well satisfied with the day's sport... These are a few of the many mottoes that were in the drill shed: "Equal rights to all," "the open bible," "one language, one law." Very suitable ones, we think.
