East Ward.—Thos. Walters.....G. W. Mills and P. G. Pilkie were nominated but withdrew. EVENING SESSION.

The evening meeting in the council, to hoar the addresses of the candidates, was a "howling success" both in point of attendance and the pitch attained by the vocal organs of a few of the speakers under the badgering they were subjected to at the hands of opponents. Standing room was at a premium, and the crowd overflowed into the police court chamber and blocked up the steps.

Col. Deacon occupied the chair, and fulfilled his somewhat delicate and certainly fatiguing duties with his usual impartiality and executive ability. Grouped around him on the platform were the candidates for the offices of reeve, mayor and deputy-reeve. It would be impossible for us to find sufficient space to present concise ex-tracts of the different addresses delivered, and it is unnecessary to do so. For once at any rate the residents of the different wards were present in sufficient numbers to judge for themselves.

Taking it all in all the meeting afforded a striking illustration of that great bulwark of British freedom—liberty of speech.
