A BURNING QUESTION.

What a Little Spark may do-Au Elequent flinstration - Equal Rights for the Lower Canadians.

From Mr Blake's speech on the Dual language Sir, we have but just heard of an event which we must all deeply deplore. The crest institution, the crowning glory, I institutions of our country is at this located. Apply to McINTYRE & STEWART. Lindsay, Jan. 21, 1890. Soft. may be permitted to say, of the educational moment in flamen, and we know not how ttle s spark may have kindled the great fire which is consuming that ornament to the whole community of Canada, the University of Toronto-that ornament, that great material ornament and still greater exhibition of the triumph of the principles of toleration and of the savance of education, a University where we had gathered the youth of all denominations, Protestant and Catholic, under the sanction even of the Roman Catholic church, a state institution of non sec arise principies, where all had gathered together as fellow-citiz-na to got the highest training the land affirded. Just se in that great calamity we may observe how little a spark, of I have said, may kindle a great fire, so let us take warning in this larger sphere, in this still greater question upon which we are now engaged, and let those who are seeking to set the heather on fire on this mention be careful before they proceed too far. (Cheera.) Let them remember that it is impossible to calculate the nature and extent of the leaves they are raising. I am not one of these who take a need. mistic view. I do not think our path is made any the plainer or our way any the amouther by these divers nationalities and creeds. I recognize the fact that our situation is such as to present difficult and dan gerous problems that we would not have in this country if we were a homogeneous people. I know that these difficulties are such that we may have to grapple with some day, but upon different lines and in different temper than we are now doing. I know the preseure which is being felt, but we will not shrink from our duty, and right will prevail in the end. Even this agitation, though its proportions may be se large se my hon. friend anticipates, will pass away, with some evil con-sequences to those who are engaged in ir, but in the end it will pass away and right and truth will provail in the end. (Applanes.) Upon what conditions can we live, thrive and grow as a nation? Certainly not on the lines indicated in this agitation. I would sek the hon, gentlemen to put themselves in the place of the french Canadians. Do they suppose they would cringingly scree to be suppressed? You may have the highest opinion of your tongue, your lives and your creed. You may wish all even to enjoy the inestimable hoon of English speech and the Protestant religion, but still put yourself in the place of the French Canadians, and hoon of English speech and the Profestant reliaion, but still nut yourself in the place of the French Candians, and what is your position? Must you not admire the courage, fidelity and determination with which he grappled with difficulties. He fought in all fields, before the legislatures and in sterner places. He fought for what is as dear to him as your hirthright is to you. He fought, sye, conquered too. Cannot you recognize that this was, after all, a victory for hamanit;?

Even if it did impose greater difficulties upon those engaged in making a nation in Canada, jet by that very dreumstance we were given a chance of more exalted triumph and the exhibition of higher justice and tolera fon than is permitted to wholly homogeneous peoples. Cannot you see that he has conquered? Do you evicusly hope to prevail where under greater disadvantages victory was obtained long age? Surely we can recognize that the thing for which he struggled was equal rights -rights equal to your own. I ou say now that his language is infinical to the constitution, that you must teach him your toware, and that he must forget his own. He is not to have what is from his point of view equal rights with the Angio-Saxon race. I regard this as a settled question, and even were my views as to the windom of he best liment different from what they are, I would not as a public man attempt to re-open a question which cannot but ensure ultimate defeat and unlimited disaster to the state. I say no, a thousand times no, to the proposal to reopen this question, I maintain that this is the duty of all who truly wish for the progress and prespectly of Canada todefead the rights of minorities. I would researd myself as disbonest if I were to yield to the forces which are brought to bear here.
It is impossible to drive hencet men by such means. It is impossible to drive me from the path of duty and honor.

It was easier to tie a shist to a line fling it overboard and let it tow. This will wash clothes wash all the warp out of them in time. The practice was at last forbidden the boys on the Wizard. It's a lazy boy's wash. The adage "It's never too late to mend" is not applicable on shipboard. It should read "It's never too early to mend." Of course a boy of 16, whose mother has always stitched for him, will allow his clothes to go until they fall off his body before using his needle. As I did. And I sewed myself up only to rip asunder immediately. I went about decks a thing of flaps, rips, rags and abortive patches, until they called me the ship's scarecrow. And so would many another spruce young man under similar discipline. It's good once in one's life to be brought thus low. -Prentice Mulford.
