COMMUNICATIONS. A Question for Local Tory Leaders. [To the Editor of THE POST']

SIH,- The wonder now is what the leaders of the tory party in Victoria South and Victoria West will do, in the face of the recent exploits of their chief organizer and spouter, Sam Hugher, editor of the Warder. The attacks of that individual upon a number of respectable members of the conservative party, and the pain which those attacks gave and are still giving to the intimate friends and families of the conservatives referred to, did not appear to other than amuse the leaders of the party. One reason assigned for this indifference on the part of the leaders to the comfort and fair fame of those whose only crime was that they had supported their party "not wisely but too well," is that the temperance sentiment of the latter was too much to be safely encouraged. No teste-taler need apply, in fact, became the motto of the Victoria tory autocratic ring, (Dominion and provincial patents obtained) and hence the encouragement given the party slugger "to go for them lively." Apassumption that the reason assigned is the correct one. As the rank and file of the party evidently have very little, if anything, to say in the matter of its management, it is not yet known whether the sentiments of the leaders have general approval. In these days of livel actions it is wheer to awalt developments rather than to risk broad assumptions; so how the rank and file teel about the situation must be left to time to decide. But what will come of the last move of the chief sponter and organizer is what the wonder is. The declaration is open court that his solicitors and prepared his pleadings improperly and after having had months to do it, was an unkind cut truly, especially when the relathe love must surpose the love of woman. We must all drop politics for a brief space in order to watch developments in this truly interesting tory political drams.

Cheese Making and Mr. Thos. Foe's Critioleme. Letter from the Socretary of the during the past week. Cambray Cheese Factory.

[To the Editor of THE Post.] Sir, In a letter in your last issue Mr. Thomas Fee evidently feels quite satisfied sot beneficial to farmers, and that the only s sweeping assertions do not require conwho are not so well versed in the benefits of this industry that if his statements were sllowed to go uncontradicted might be led to infer that he was right, has induced the theese business generally and the Cambrey factory in particular. At the outset I do not wish to infer that Mr. Fee wilfully makes missistements, but from being a petron to a factory which evidently was mismanaged, if no stronger term can be applied, he is led to think that all factories are like the unfortunate West Ops. Mr. Fee is shrewd enough to know that writer to give a few fact in regard to the cheese business serversity and instantory factory in particular that Mr. Fee wilfully notices missustements, but from being the particular problem insustements but from being the particular problem insustements but from being the particular problem insustements but from being the particular problem in the partic that the stock of Cauadian cheese "is reduced to the narrowest dimensions," and this, coupled with the fact that beef is commanding high prices, which always results in an increased consumption of cheese, leads me to infer that good prices will rule. I might also add that I have no desire to enter into a controversy with Mr. Fee, but would say to him and other farmers: have they not in their dairying interests an answer to the barley problem which at the present time looks so difficult of solution. Craving your indulgence for using so much of your valuable space,—I remain, yours respectfully. SEC. CAMBRAY CHEESE FACTORY.

[We do not think Mr. Pee's snimadversions on this question will have much weight with intelligent farmers who know from innumerable cases that cheese-making is a profitable business for the farmer se well as the maker and dealer. Cheese making is one of the most profitable industries of several of the most progressive counties of Ontario, and it will be a good day for Victoria county and for Lindeay when there are fifty or a hundred factories tributary to this town. The presence of fifty more factories in the county would benefit and not injure those now in existence. Mr. Fee's attacks may stimulate interest in the question and promote this industry.-Ro Post.
