at increason for causing it to give a dissecurit, and I will ask you to look his picture and on that:

Waar convinced that the province is rading a great mistake in using wood in the new parliament building in the park. in that promises to be the finest in sp. passance of any on the continent, that suprary to be built on the plan of getting arch indeed cents' worth of work on the deliar, that ought to be a monument for sturies, is to be marred at its inception by the use of timber instead of from." trees) And again, on 11th August, 1888, in an article descriptive of the character progress of these buildings, the war is progressing at the grand structure n to seek. In close proximity to Toron-to's miver-lity and its subsidiary institu-tion, the new legislative building is being to's culver-ity and its subsidiary institu-ion, the new legislative building is being appeared. This massive and imposing structure, stretching cast and west 550 feet and it making 250 feet to the rear of the trut tower, is now advanced to such a crust tower, is now advanced to such a stage that some idea of its beauty and symmetry can be formed. The style of architecture in Romanesque. It is eminamely simple and atriking in detail. Mr. 3. A Waite, architect, of Buffelo, pre-pared the plans and designs for the build-This was the plan that was now represented as one uterly naworthy of the y. The south west front is richly ornamented by milita vet massive dressed stone work. west elevation will contain two enrances, one of which, the speaker's, is open to the north side, slong which finical the eastern elevation is similar, though shown it less gorgeous."

the Empire says: "The big pile slowly rises." (laughter) in a more measured strain, in a big, massive, elephantine strain aughter) it goes on: "The average seker who, stan ling by, watches stone after stone holsted into position has no enception at all of the magnitude of the work in hand. The building overs no less than four acres of ground, and the massive stone walls, lined with brick, are, in some parts, six feet in blokness. The building is evidently being ap to stand, no matter what the ultihate cost might be. The main corrance, the entrance to the legislative chamber from the wouth, will be something hand-some in its massiveness. The smoothly stone steps will not be built in all probroadty until after the whole building is reofed, because the required blocks cannot e pot. The main eutrance is in & line woking down Queen-st. avenue, and when completed the effect will be something the. In its present incomplete state, everer, it would be useless to attempt a is script in of the great building. A fea-ure of the structure, however, will be the amount of stone carving exhibited on all tiles. The carving on the front of the building to the south will be of the most claborate character, while grote que but britatic figures will stand on each side of each of the departmental entrances. There are many panels on the walls, which will arry fixures and scroll work carved in the salifatore. The building will, no doubt, where completed, be the finest structure in this stage to give any idea of the cost."

illear, hear, and laughter.) Now, let me say for a moment that this government, knowing that in the near fature there was to be an election, if they had wanted to do something that would tell for them and to be dishonest, would have spurned outside experience in the way of an architect and would have taken at anadian architect. (Cheers.) So plainly is that to be seen that my friend, Mr. J. Ross Robertson of the Toronto Telegram, an independent conservative journal, says

Hon. C. F. Fracer is fortified against vircive attacks upon his dealing with the question of crecting new parliament buildings. The government supported an outlay that is barely sufficient to satisfy the requirement and keep up the dignity of the province. The minister of public works is seeing that the province gets full value for every cent it spends. The country is not being cheated, and when the opposition cannot boldly impute when to the Hom. Mr. Fracer it is unfair to the Hom. Mr. Fracer it is unfair to claim against an expenditure that was wholly unsystiable. As to the architest, the government acted upon its judgment of what was right. Political interest would have dictated the choice of a native Canadian to originate and execute designs for the new legislative building. The government puts aside every consideration but that of fitness, and did not allow the unpopularity of its course to deter it from doing what was right." (Cheera.)

Of all the small issues ever imported into Ontario positics the complaint about the Ontario government's dealings with the parliament buildings is the smallest.

And again in a subsequent issue as fol-

'There is absolutely nothing in it. From beginning to end the government has acted in the best interests of the country. It would have been easy for it to employ a Canadian architect and excuse his mistakes by appeals to a spurious patriotism. The government could gain no political glory by its action. It served the province in this particular at the expense of party interest, and time will declare praise, not censure, to be the just portion of the men charged with the responsibility of the erection of the new legislative block." (Cheere.)

Truer words than those never were spoken. And now I have

DEALT WITH ALL THE CHARGES made by Mr. Meredith in that manifesto: and I sek what is there in any one of those that would lead you to neglect those seven honest, earnest, true men and take in those persons who, for political purposes, make them to become good and useful citizans. His legislature came nobly to the relief of the university when a great calamity overtook that institution. (Applause.) In all these matters he has been a wise, progressive and liberal statesman. There is another matter which comes home to us very closely. This is the only province in the Dominion that is not in debt. Instead of a debt it has a surplus of six millions of money because of thritty, judicious and them to become good and useful citizans.

money because of inritty, judicious and clear management. (Loud cheers.) I am reading to you from the Toronto Mail, which also said on April 11th, 1890: "On the whole his management has been clean and free from scandal. These are powerful reasons for giving him a new term." I thank the Mail, as a conservative journal, for this truthful testimony to the financial management of the sffairs of this province. And I believe that in the mind of that writer there was a comparison by tween the state of afficirs at Toronto and some place cise. (Laughter.) We have in that city of Octawa fur thieves. (Senestion.) I am a believer in equal rights. I don't believe in nillorying a man who steels a dol. lieve in pillorying a man who stesis a dol-lar and giving different treatment to a man who has a title and is a general. (Loud and prolonged cheering.) Fur thieves! (Applause and laughter.) The poor tellow that had taken the queen's shilling in a not house dare not have done what General Middleton does, and flaunts himself to the public as if he was an honest and true man.
(Applause.) What grieves me is not that there should be one sinner in the land but that when he comes here people should get with the construction of the Lindsay st. him to lecture upon honesty and propriety and decency in the army. (Applause.) Before this grand assembly I impeach them all—(sppisuse)—as partakers in the iniquity of this man—(A voice—Rykert and the Cypress Hills.) Oh, bless you, yes. I am glad my friend has given me that.

as though another Schom and Gomorrah

was beiching out.

I MADE THE STATEMENT PURPOSELY. I did not leave Gen. Middleton alone. I included those who stand by him and write letters about him, because it deteriorates the moral feeling of this land and depreclates a great crime when it has been committed in our midst, and I finally say upon this point that it is a legitimate outcome of the greatest scandal that ever was upon this country—the Pacific scandal, (Cheers.) And if you and I had stood true, and if this country had stood true for honesty and righteousness, he would not now have paraded before us these wrongs, which, unfortunately, people are led to think they may commit, because sometimes it is found out and sometimes it is not. (Cheers.) I say the present government is on its trial. You have seven honest, true, capable men, and they have been for some time carrying on the affairs of the govern. time carrying on the affairs of the government in a way that is unimpeachable, (Caeers.) Two of their supporters are now before you, well-known men. We need not blush or hang our heads whether we discuss the principles they represent, their integrity or their ability. They are men who have compaired amongst us. We know them in these respects as men that will be creditable representatives of the out. (Cheers.) I commend them to now. city. (Cheers.) I commend them to you. I make no appeal to you based on the tory cries of fear and prejudice. I would scorn to do this. I appeal to your resson, I appeal to your sense of the truth of what I have been saying. I appeal to the glorious have been saying. I appeal to the glorious traditions of the past and to the hopes for the future of the liberal party. (Cheera.) I appeal to each one here upon your responsibilities to your leaders, to your country to some for the whole red to some first the council go into committee of the whole red to some for the whole red to some for the some for the some for the some for the whole red to some for the some for the whole red to some for the whole red to some for the whole red to some for the some for th appeal to each one here upon your responsibilities to your leaders, to your country, to your Got. Moved by Mr. S. H. Blake, seconded by Mr. J. J. Withrow, "That this mass meeting of the liberals of Ontario declares its unshaken confidence in the Hon. Professor Fraenkel, one of Koch's assistants, and Professor Brieger have isolated and found the long-searched-for cause of diphtheria. Taxalbumen is the name given to the new "germ," and it is described as a snow-white, granular body, allied to albumen. When injected into an animal's sore throat (in the white membrane noticeable in such cases for instance,) a high fever soon develops, and death soon ensues. The distinguished professors referred to claim that after such an experiment the exact symptoms of diphtheria can be readily noted. been practiced upon several of the residents of Manvers. A smooth-tongued chap goes to a farmer and says he intends starting a singing school in the district, and would like to use his house for practices. He is willing to pay rent for the use of the rooms, and in addition will put in a first-class piano, and in case the farmer can dispose of it to his neighbors, he will allow him a commission of $100. Before leaving, however, the agent pulls out a blank form and says he wants written authority for leaving the piano at the house, to give to his partner, who performs the work of delivering. The form is signed by the unsuspecting victim; in due course the piano is delivered; but no singing lessons are given. In a month the farmer is notified that his note for $400 will be due on a certain date at a certain bank, and then he finds for the first time that the erder he has signed was in reality an agreement to accept the piano at $400, which sum he agrees to pay in one month.
