-A Landon cable report save: Since the tremendous blow in the body, delivered to It by the Barrow electors on Wednesday, the poor tory cum-unionist government has been in such a pitiful condition that for mere mercy's sake its enemies are giving it time to recover breath. The shock of this blow cannot be described to those who study English politics from a distance. Compared with it all other disasters which the ministry have encountered since 1886 were trivial. The bumptions and Bistant Uaine, having quarreiled with the unionists and resigned his seat, thought he could impose himself upon the local liberale on his own terms. He made so much noise and seemed such a terrible fellow in the small area of the house of commons that Gladstonian leaders here were all in favor of killing an unlimited number of fatted calves for him, but the local liberals said no. Their fight with Caine had been too long and bitter to be thus set saide. They lusted on running their own man When the result was announced, and, to the general bewilderment, the liberal party the general bewilderment, the liberal party was discovered to lead in the poll, the effect was instantaneous. The government curied up like Bret Harte's philosopher under the application of the red sandatone to his abdomen. Caine flopped on his kness and numbly prayed the liberals to allow him to return to the fold on their terms instead of his. As for the liberale and the lirish, they are mustering all their forces to lift the roof of the parliament house on Monday with cheers of triumph when the victorious liberal takes his seat for Berrow. This coming week will be one long and crue punishment to the disabled and tottering government. Ali the legisla tion which the ministers announced at the beginning of the session must now be abandoned, and to day there is a report thes poor his. Smith will be elevated to the peerage. Probably if Mr. Smith does vanies Mr. Goesen will undertake the task of conducting the panic stricken retreat of the government forces. Under him it is likely to become a veritable rout. The ministers themselves are all at sea as to what to do next. If they try to save anything out of the wreck and make a rally on any part of their scattered program it will be the new standing order enabling measures to be passed to a certain stage one session and resumed at that point the fol-lowing session. At first there was a strong disposition on the liberal side to accept this plan, but now Mr. Gladstone has decided to oppose it root and branch, and has the whole compact party at his back in his determination to quatinately dispute every inch of its progress. This would make so prolonged a debate that the routine business of the house would keep the session into the autumn, and so there is an expectation to day that this also will be abendoned. In all this there is a curious political moral. The present ministry has standoned. In all this there is a curious political moral. The present ministry has still a big majority at its command, but this majority is practically useless, because it is now clearly shown that the country is hostile to it. The exhibition is a welcome one because it shows that parliamentary government, so far from degenerating into Presponsible rule by politicians, becomes, in spite of itself, more and more a reflection of the nonular will.
