-The loronto Telegram published an interview the other day between a reporter of that journal and a Mr. McMichael of Dakota, who was passing through the city to visit friends in Pickering township. Mr. McMichael said that the crops this year in that part of Dakota in which he lived water the large surfaces and that are rest in that part of Dakota in which he lived were simply ruinous, and that everybody was getting ready to leave. Being saked where they were going, he said that nearly all were going across the lines into the Cauadian Northwest, where crops this year were splendid. Now the evidence against Dakota is too great in bulk to be overlooked. Some people from there write stating that the crops are good enough. In certain small sections this may be true, but as a whole Dakota is peopled with farmers on the verge of bankruptcy. Appeals for sid to Dakotans will reach Ontario before another month goes by, or we are misled by the information received. Boys, steer clear of Dakota. teer clear of Dakota.

A great migration from Dakota is said to have commenced. People who went there a few years ago from other states and from Manitobs and Ontario are returning to their old homes poorer than when they left them. They seem to have learned by hitter experience that failure of the harvest is the rule rather than the exception in Dakots. The bad reputation that Dakots is getting is likely to injure Manitohe among the people who do not know the facts. They are likely to assume that the climate of Manitoba must be similar to if not inferior to that of the state to the south. Dakota's great trouble is drought, and Manitoba is saved from this by its proximity to Hudson Bay. However, the pent proof of the superiority of Manitoba is to be found in a yearly comparison of its harvests with those of Pakota. The Canadian province has had its troubles and has been subject to much unfriendly criticism, but the farmers of Manitoba have never been in such desperate straits as have been their American neighbors. Those who have remained in the province have no reason to regret it. Those who emigrated are returning, and all they gained by their experiment is a lesson which many Canadiana need to learn, namely, that it is a good thing to know when one is well cif. -A London correspondent cables : Six weeks of assiduous golf-playing on the St. Andrew's links, in the bracing Fifeshire air, have toned Mr. Balfour's languid system up to such a degree of ardor that there were rumors the other day that he was going to get married forthwith. It seems that these observers mistook the symptoms. apiary.

and in the middle of the chicial holiday discovere the little one in a short time, but life are extinct. In this puzzled condition his editorial supporters still remain. They are printing long-winded leaders praising his breve and manly action, but you may search them all from top to bottom in a vain endeavor to find a single hint of comfrom going to America to get new funda for the league. It would take too long to enumerate all the little circumstances which, dove tailed together, fairly substantiate this impression. It is enough to say that everybody believes he had no other more in the game, the home rulers are things must happen. Resident magistrates can give O'Brien and Dillon sentences of one month, from which there is no appeal, or longer sentences, against which appeals can be instantly lodged and the accused meanwhile can remain at liberty. In the first instance, their visit to America will be merely postponed for a month. In the arcond, they could sail pending an appeal, and could count upon the increased warmth in their reception in America to make good their $10,000 of extrepted ball. There is a third possibility, namely, that they may or six charges, not to run concurrently. This is a favorite device in Ireland to prevent appeals and secure extended terms imprisonment, but it is feit that its use in the present cases would create a scandal both in England and America which would be damaging to the government. Thus, as I said, the home rule managers both here and in Dublin smile with satisfaction at Balfour's latest false movement. A London cable says: It is already ovident that Ireland does not intend to remain quiet under the fresh provocation given by Balfour. For months past the country has been singularly quiet, fewer meetings having been held and fewer speeches made than at any equal period Balfour, ead to eay, mistook this calm for apathy, and members of the Dublin Castle clique from whom he obtained his informa-tion had actually persuaded both the chief accretary and themselves that Irishmen had grown weary of the long strungle against landlordism and misgovernment. It was believed by these fatuous politicians and bureaucate that they had only to clap the leaders in prison to cause a general up-rising of the Irish people against the na-tional league and the tyranny under which they were supposed to be groaning. The landlords, seeing a prospect of collecting their rents before actual famine began to pinch their tenants, cunningly encouraged the efficial optimism. Ballour's police agent at the same time assured him that the ceffers of the national league were the coffers of the national lengue were nearly empty, and urged him to stop or embarraes the mission to America, which alone could replenish them speedily. All these representations were very scothing to Balfour's vanity, and he willingly consented to take action. At this stage of the official conspiracy the actual date fixed for the determinant Mr. O'little and Mr. Dillow official conspiracy the actual date fixed for the departure of Mr. O'livion and Mr. Dillon was indiscreetly published, and it became necessary to set speedily. The records kept at Dublin Castle of the nationalist speeches were burriedly examined and selections made of those likely to be useful. How heatily and clumally the work was finally done is revealed by the warraste upon which the memoers were streeted. British lawyers of eminence are of the opinion that they are lensily worthless, but that is looking at the matter from an English point of view. They will very probably prove good enough for Balfour's magistrates, and the only chance that the people of America will have of hearing William O'Bries and John Dillon this wister will depend upon the yiength and method of the continue. In Iroland the method of the continue of the method of the continue. In Iroland the method of th the departure of Mr. O'Brist and Mr. Dillos us are being organised where none had us intended for months to come, and the item intended for months to come, and the dissales will some become as lively as perhaps to compet Balfour to exchange guif-playing in Septemb for serious work in Dublin.

—≜ London correspondent cables: But if one thinks of the governing of Ireland as something more than a political game there is much at once heartrending and revolting in this present situation. Friday here were eviction parties at work on the Ireland, with an aggregate force of 450 constables, ejecting tenants and dismantling the cottages of their own building. In one place in the mountains near New Ross —Joseph Iswin of Leamington, Out., had been missing date from his bern, and set an old-fashioned bear trap to catch the output. Next morning on going out he found an old man named Knight fast in the trap, his leg badly iscerated. On being liberated the old man fainted, and when he after them. The very day of the recent the blight, and even now are suffering from hunger daily, but out they went all the same and their homes were destroyed after them. The very day of the recent arrests the Dublin Express, the organ of the Castle, had an inspired article ridiculing the idea that there was going to be any scarcity of food in even the poorest districts, and suggesting that the reports of a potato blight, like the so-called famine of 1879, were a mere party device. Now the destruction of the potato crop is an unquestioned fact. Unless widespread relief is brought in a cruel famine must also be a fact within a few weeks, yet the government organ coolly laughe at this and the government itself coolly sets in motion its eviction machinery with one hand while with the other it puts the people's leaders in prison. It is difficult to credit the fact that English gentlemen and statesmen in this closing decade of the ninsteenth century are lending themselves to such a hideous travesty of government. I say lending cous travesty of government. I say lending, because Mr. Balfour knows as little of eous travesty of government. I say lending, because Mr. Balfour knows as little of what Ireland is really like as his dullest English collesque in the cabinet. What purport to be his acts are really the schemes of a little group of scoundrelly lawyers, landlords' agents and political adventurers in Dublin, who have fastened themselves upon the Castle, and who fatten on the misery of their country. What they want most of all is to provoke the Irish peasantry to disorder and deeds of violence. Unless very soon they can manage to stir up moonlighting and cattle houghing in Connaught, or, what would be much better, tempt another batch of irish-American fools to come over with dynamite, they will see their power in Ireland awept away by the British electorate. This is the real secret of what is now going on. It is to this incredibly base end going on. It is to this incredibly base end that now, in the very face of famine, Irish leaders are being arrested and evictions

One or two neath civic honors, the guardian and trustee of an hundred interests; later still the man against whom his fellows could utter no imprecation too forcible, no condemnation too strong, for the way he bad violated trusts, manipulated wrongfully public and private funds, and financially ruined all sorts of clients; this man is now, ac cording to our informant, an object of pity. Crippled, emaciated and spiritlese would seem that his iniquities have come home to roost.

-Mr. A. P. Reid, the veteran cheese maker of Belleville, last year made some cheese which asconished England by its size. This year he is going to surpass himself by turning out "the biggest cheese ever made in Canada," He has contracted with Mesers, Hodgson Bros. of Montreal to supply twenty cheese weighing from twelve to fifteen hundred pounds each, and one of them to go as high as eighteen hundred pounds. These cheese, which are for large dealers in the old country, are heing made at the Ashiey factory, of which Mr. Reid is the present owner; and the first two left Belleville last week.

This 'coon story is told by the Bradford News: "On Monday last C. Royaton, sec tien foremat. In company with Jake Har-rison, was going north on the hand car when they saw two coons on the track ahead of them. They decided to give chase and the coons were slowly but surely overhauled. The animals kept to the track, and just as the car was about to nass over them one darted to the right and the other to the left, when the wheels guil-lotined them, the heads rolling outside the rails while the car passed over the bodies."

.... The story is not quite complete. The express came along and curiously enough the driving wheels skinned the carcases and the palace car trucks natled the hides to an adjacent telegraph pole.

Joseph Covert, a farmer who lives near the head of Big Island. Bay of Quinte, the Intelligencer says, brought to town the intelligencer says, but had last week been observed in that locality. The creature, which has been seen by four persons reparately, is described as being as large as a sawlog, with a head as big as a teakettle, and it travels with great speed. A girl who was driving her father's cows on a road near the water saw the monater within forty feet of her. It was swimming very rapidly, and made a ruehing noise in the water, above which it elevated its head. Another said it seemed to be very bulky for about eight or ten feet of its length, which he saw, thence it apparently tapered, but what its total length was he could not say.
