A Heavy Stock Raiser.

W. F. Edinger branded last spring over 2,000 calves, and has sent to market this season 6,000 head cattle. These figures prove Mr. Edinger to be one of the largest stock raisers in the country.

There are others who send more cattle to the market, but they buy them instead of raising them. He has over 30,000 head of stock cattle, and 100,000 acres of pasture land. He got patents last month for 15,000 acres of swamp land in the bush.

New Ideas about Sorghum

The sorghum plant is one of the most valuable crops raised in the West. It is a native of the East Indies, and is now cultivated in many parts of the world. It is a hardy plant, and is well adapted to the soil and climate of the West.

Agricultural Shows Their Times

An experienced stockman, Col. Wild, puts officers, exhibitors and spectators of fairs on their guard. He writes in the August American Agriculturist as follows: "Influence is brought to bear upon the jury of awards in various ways. One man will openly address a judge in praise of his competitor's exhibit, and loudly call attention to the best points, but quietly repeat certain defects, or expressions about the age or breeding of the animals, or other points affecting the competing exhibit."

live stock in Wisconsin. The letter part of summer is often very trying to live stock. Pastures are short, old grass is high, the new mow is fit to feed. Milk may be in great demand and the farmer looks to it in his own fodder, intended for curing, to feed off the afternoon; he is lucky who can turn his young stock of high wooded pastures, where they will have water and may make at least half a living upon underbrush, etc. Early sown fodder crops come in well now for milk cows, and there is really no other good use for it. If cut for curing it is hard to dry without moiding and moulding, and if left to stand until after the middle of September, when it will cure well, it will be so woody and tough as "corn stalks." When fed to milk cows, fodder crops ought to be cut short and sprinkled with two or four quarts of corn meal per cow each day. There will then be no complaint of the quality of the milk. If these are fed without the meal the milk will surely be thin, and the cows are exhausted by the increased flow, and soon fall off in yield.

Horses in pasture are often extremely annoyed by flies. If they can stand when not in use in dark, sweet stables, by all means turn them into the pasture only at night. Gnats and mosquitoes are of little annoyance to horses, but the larger fly, and the (Kivra, or Bot-fly, set them almost crazy.

Ewes and lambs are usually separated in August, and while none of our domestic animals is more often used as a type of maternal affection than the ewe, yet the agony of separation will be of short duration, and not especially painful if the ewe and lambs are not separated so far apart as not to hear each others calls. It is well to put with the lambs a few wethers or flock leaders, or a ram or two if there is danger of annoyance by passing dogs. The ewes should be penned and their milk drawn enough to relieve their udders several evenings in succession after taking the lambs away. Wounds on any kind of animals are liable to be fly-blown and very annoying. The best treatment that we know of an application of strong carbolic soap. That which is sold as sheep dip is very good; but be careful not to use the arsenical sheep dips or anything of that kind. Soft soap or semi-solid soap strongly impregnated with crude carbolic acid is good, and any one can make it. It will be found good for all kinds of raw sores, galls, bites, scurfiness and the like on man or beast.

The place for pigs at this season is in the apple orchard; the falling fruit is wormy, unless indeed a gale shakes off sound fruit, and the pigs unconsciously slay thousands of injurious insects.

The Indefatigable Goat.

The town goat has the run of the town. He is not domestic in his habits. He is seldom ever seen asleep. The goat is composed mainly of horns, hair, and digestive organs. When not engaged in putting the breath out of some member of his owner's family, or peeling the bark off the neighbor's fruit trees, he may be found standing on an empty beer keg, in front of the corner grocery, gleefully chewing wrapping paper and empty sardine boxes. The town goat is respected and feared by all who are acquainted with his eccentricities of character. He is a very reliable animal. He can be relied on to eat a week's washing, break several windows and purrse thirty-seven dogs into the adjoining yard, all in one day, and not work half the time. Policemen shoot at him, boys try to discourage him with stones, and housekeepers empty kettles of water on him. As a result of these assaults he usually has chips and splinters broken off his at every angle and angle of his anatomy, yet still he is cheerful and frolicsome. His jaunty tail gives him a detour and rather appearance that causes some people to assume that he isn't all that he should be; but they judge him too hastily, as people of strong prejudices are prone to do.

These remarks about the goat are suggested by an incident that happened last week to a party named McWhirter, who lives in Wisconsin, and who owns a goat. McWhirter lives on an oatmeal diet and the interest of his money. On Monday evening of last week, Mr. McWhirter was out in the yard feeding his cow. He had taken off his coat and laid it on the fence. In the pocket of his coat was a Morocco pocket-book containing government bonds to the amount of $2,000. Why McWhirter carried the bonds in his pocket instead of placing them in his safe, we are not told. When he had attended to the wants of the cow, and turned to get his coat, he found the garment lying in the mud. The goat had pulled it off the fence, and now stood balancing himself on the roof of the chicken coop. As he came within the range of McWhirter's vision, and a roar that the old man propelled in his direction, he was in the act of mounting what was evidently the content of a red Morocco pocket-book.

As the awful and disastrous character of the misfortune suffered by McWhirter, and he retained that his $2,000 in bonds were fled away in the digestive machinery of a goat, he gave vent to his feelings in a yell that sounded like the wail of a pair of bagpipes leading a funeral procession; and with a cry in every feature and a whistle in his teeth he leaped for that lost goat. The goat decided not to wait for him. He did not tarry, but proceeded with a celerity and buoyancy that were unexampled in a four-legged animal—to get a large area of the landscape between himself and his owner. The goat went strutting down the street, the immediate cause being, the goat hearing a distant defiance and McWhirter waving the hay fork in the ambient gloaming and calling on the populace to head off that $2,000 bond, pedagogue crowded on his heels and back driven down the street, until the procession passed. McWhirter fell over two baby buggies, entangled his hay fork in an old man's ear, and was several times tripped up by policemen, who thought he was a crazy man, for they couldn't understand why any one could take so much absorbing interest in an ordinary goat that could be bought any day at $30 a dozen. McWhirter stopped not, neither did he stay his footsteps, but after each delay increased his speed, and renewed his opportune petitions to the passer-by to "stop the goat!" "catch the incoherent thief!" etc., etc. Over a hundred feet he ran, and then he stopped. He was in a stable. A lamp was hanging and under its illumination he saw the goat out the goat's throat, and then pried him open with an axe. Inside him was found an assortment of clothe-line, manilla paper, hay, under-clothing, a child's shoe, and a piece of a broken mirror, but there was no trace of the $2,000 State bonds. McWhirter tried to swear, but emotion choked his utterances. He directed the butcher to give the remains to the poor, and went home in a hack to find his pocket book and the bonds in the pocket of his coat where he had left them.

From Rev. H. L. Gilman, of Glover, Vt. "I have been troubled for several years past with a difficulty of the heart and lungs, have applied to several physicians for help, and have tried almost every remedy recommended, without receiving any assistance; but have been growing weaker and weaker, until, hearing of Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry about a year since, I recommended using it, with immediate relief. It has not only restored my lungs to a sound state, but I am entirely relieved of the difficulty of disease of the heart. I have no hesitation in saying that it is the best lung medicine before the public, and I cheerfully and conscientiously recommend it to all persons suffering from pulmonary complaints." Fifty cents and $1 a bottle. Sold by dealers generally.

There are at present 100,000 feet of timber at Hastings, and 30,000 feet at Waukenshene, awaiting shipment over the G. T. R. No remedy has been found for Fever and Ague which proves so uniformly successful as Ayer's Ague Cure.

Cathartic Pills

Combine the choicest cathartic principles in medicine, in proportions accurately adjusted to secure activity, certainty, and uniformity of effect. They are the result of years of careful study and practical experiment, and are the most effective remedy yet discovered for diseases caused by derangement of the stomach, liver, and bowels, which require prompt and effectual treatment. AYER'S PILLS are especially applicable to this class of diseases. They act directly on the digestive and assimilative processes, and restore regular healthy action. Their extensive use by physicians in their practice, and by all civilized nations, is one of the many proofs of their value as a safe, sure, and perfectly reliable purgative medicine. Being compounded of the concentrated virtues of purely vegetable substances, they are positively free from calomel or any injurious properties, and can be administered to children with perfect safety.

As a Dinner Pill they have no equal. While gentle in their action, these Pills are the most thorough and searching cathartic that can be employed, and never give pain unless the bowels are inflamed, and then their influence is healing. They stimulate the appetite and digestive organs; they operate to purify and enrich the blood, and impart renewed health and vigor to the whole system. PREPARED BY DR. J. C. AYER & CO., Lowell, Mass. SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS EVERYWHERE.
