A Strike at Penefon Falls. [From the Gasette.]

There is trouble between some of our mill owners and their employees with reference to the number of hours the lat-ter are to work, and on Monday morning about half of MeArthur & Thomson's hands struck for a reduction of time and have not since returned to the mill. In almost all occupations ten hours are considered a fair day's work—that is, from seven in the morning until six in the evening, with one hour for dinner; but during this season McArthur & Thomson's men have been forced to toil laboriously from 5:45 a. m. to 0:15 p. m., with only thirty minutes cessation at noon. This the strikers have refused to submit to any longer, and we fancy there will he few found to blame them. They say that they are kept going at full speed from morning until night; that they have Proprieter.
