English Crain Markets. The London Economist of the 11th instant has the following review of the state of the groin market during the week ending on the 10th instant;— The dry coarseter has had a variable effect upon the growing crops. Wheat, although not presenting a luxurient appearance, gives fair promise of an averagreture. On heavy hads, where moisture has been retained, considerable progress has been recarded, consider the portain a whole the crop is backward. There is no ground for apprehension as to the probable yield, and very little reason for many runners started in respect to the atticks of wireworm and the like, which appear to have been very portial in their extent. On the other hand the spring erops have suffered much from the loag centinued deought. Outs and burley are afrein will remedy the indispatible deficleney of of these crops Buley is likely, therefore, to tend upwards in value, but with a will, and received the station time; but whether Tom got consistions part of it as shough to dry and having made all these arrangements to say.
