"That bed is not long enough for me, said a very tall and very graff Englishman, upon being ushered into his bedroom by an Irish waiter at one of our hotels. 'Faith an' you'll find it is plenty long, sir, when you get into it,' was the reply, 'for then there'll be two feet more added to it.' Exit Pat, with a boot fetching up the rear.

Garibaldi is a wonderful man.

"Reliable" intelligence during the past week shows: (1.) That he spends inost of his time in training a Newfoundland dog. (2.) That he is teaching a young ladies' seminary.

(2.) That he is prevented by Italian guards from leaving Caprera for fear he will raise another insurrection.

(3.) That he is writing another book.

Bainging in the Heaps.—Apropos of Greece, a story is told by one of the French Papers. One of the military commanders having offered a reward for each brigand's head brought in, the supply became so extensive that suspicions were aroused. Inquiry was set on foot, and disclosed the fact that, with an eye to the main chance, the so called brigand-hunters made raids into neighboring villages, plundered them, and then turned the heads of their victims to account. THE COW TREE. — Among the many curious phenomena which presented themselves to me in the course of my travels, says Humboldt, 1 confess there were none by which my imagination wasso powerfully affected as by the cow tree. On the parched side of a rock on the mountains of Venezuela grows a tree with dry and leathery fuliage, its leaves are not moistened by a shower; its branches look as if they were dead and withered; but when the trunk is bored, a bland and nourishing milk flows from it.
