story is told in Brunswick, which shows that at least on one occasion he was outwitted.

A student called into the market one morning, and seeing a large tub full of eggs on the floor, eyed it very wisely for some moments, and thus accosted Mister Sweat:

'I will wager twenty five cents that I can jump into that tub and not break an egg.'

'You can't do it,' said Sweat.

'I'll stake twenty-five cents I can,' Well, here's twenty five,' continued Sweat, 'put up your money.'

The money was accordingly soleumly put into the hands of a third party, and the student prepared for the difficult encounter.

In a moment he made a leap, and the next moment he fell crash into the tub of eggs and rested his feet on the bottom—breaking nearly all the eggs in the tub.

There,' exclaimed Sweat, in a fury and consistence of his to be consistent to the content of the difficult encounter.

And moment he made a leap, and the next moment he fell crash into the bottom—breaking nearly all the eggs in the tub.

There,' exclaimed Sweat, in a fury and only a large in the tub.

Turning the Tables With a Ven-

A small farmer not far from the ancient city of Brechin had long been anspected by the gamekeeper on the estate, of which his farm furmed part, of emptying his snares—Early one fine morning the farmer was engaged in taking out a newly caught hare, when, happening to glance round, he espied the keeper making towards him with all haste. Not the least disconcerted, the farmer the least disconcerted, the farmer disengaged the struggling animal, and giving her a slight kick turned her adult. The found you at last, exclaimed the gamekeeper Tex, The found you out at last, said the farmer, as he confronted the keeper, and shook his closed fist in his face. These shook his closed fist in his face, 'I have lang thucht that was your wark,' as he pointed to the empty snare. 'Now, look you here,' added the seemingly enraged farmer. I dina face a strac hoo mony beasts you shoot on my grund, but I'll no alloo you or any there bodie to tether your vermin among my stuff. So mind you that,' he added, as he turned his heel and bent his steps homeward, inwardly chuckling to think how neatly he had made Nimrod eatch a Turtur.

Two cooks in a Chicago hotel got into a riot, and one had her head broken with a skillet. The coroner recommended that people should paymore attention to the thickness of the skull, or such accidents would be very common. A cook's skull ought to be at least half an inch thick the way skillets are made now.

A music teacher once wrote that the art of playing the violin requires the nicest perception and the most some of any art in the known world. FIRST-CLASS PICTURES

I will introduce every valuable discovery in photographic science and spare no expense to make my work equal to any in the Province.

There is nothing in the discoveries of science in late years that has made such progress as Photography. By comparing the Photographs taken some years ago with those made now it will be seen that the former were more caricathres than true pictures.—The vulgar, chalky faces of the past are ampereeded by those of artistic shading, and pictures made only to fade by those of permanence and durability.
