lie, representally; "how ungrateral he will think me!"
She was very thoughtful and silent during the remainder of the journey, for the could not get that strange resemblance out of her north, recalling as it did the memory of her lover's supposed perfled with a polgrainey more bitter than the had yet experienced.

The next morning Hugh might have been seen hovering about the vicinity of Sir Rishard's house, in the hope of catching a glimpse of Julie, and of getting speech with her; for, if such an opportunity occurred, he resolved to avail himself of it. After waiting several hours in vain, he saw an elderly domestic than the house the followed him.

to her that vindictive woman. "He must sign the death-warrart, or they will tear the crown from off his head. Have you not for days heard the cries of the people for vengeance? Refuse it them on this tyrant, and they will turn their wrath upon ye! Besides, hath not this traitor earl threatened to denounce you to the King—to reveal your intrigues with Rome—with all your confidants? Hath he not sworn to turn the King's love for you to loathing? One more effort, even though in self-detence, and all will be well."

And so, full of wild terror, she fled into the presence of her lord, and cast herself at his feet, and implored him—room had he not stretched forth his hand and detained her. "I cannot do this, he said, in a voice of agony. "My kingly word of honor is pledged that he shall take no harm; were I to break it. "she nuttered wildly. Then, history would brand me as the falsest of false monarchs, and every honest heart would fall away from me. I cannot—I will not condemn this faithful servant, whose only crime has been serving me too well."

With sobs and cries of coward, selsely tarret. The control of the montion of Sir Richard Danbenay's name.

"There is no power in earth or in air that can fight against the decrees of fals." she nuttered wildly. Then, turning her stony, Gorgon-like looks upon Hugh, she added, with savage storm, "Esan sold his tithright for a mess of pottage; you have sold yours for even a lower price—a woman's smile! Go! leave, and never cross my path again!"

There was that in har the mention of size in the counter of the the player, he would offer to acquit the debt with money, as though I were a lacquey. But it may not be always so; if this, which Master Serivener would have me believe, be true, I may aspire even as high as that."

Musing thus he took his way towards London; and from that hour Julie's image was enabrined in his heart.

But to return to the ladies.

"Sire," it said, "after a long and hard struggle, I have come to the only resolution befitting me. All private interest abould give way to the happiness of your sacred person and of the state. I entreat you to remove, by attending to this Bill, the obstacle which prevent a happy concord between you and your subjects. Sire, my consent herein shall acquit you more to God than all the world can do beside. I only ask that you would grant to my poor son and his three sisters as much kindness, neither more nor less, as their will think me!"
