The letters and talks contained in this little work have already appeared in commercial journals, and the great favor with which they were received has led to their publication in a more durable form, by the author. The work contains good and sound advice, and should be in the possession of all those about entering into business pursuits.

HARD TIMES.—Some of the Lindsay lawyers met with a rather hard time when travelling Friday last. Several were in Woodville attending the division court, but as the business was light and court over early, it was resolved to proceed to Victoria Station and hold the court there the same day. This was accordingly done and an effort made to strike the railway in time to catch the evening train for Lindsay. But it was no go, the roads were too rough and the snow too heavy, and to add to their misfortunes one of the and to add to their misfortunes one of the horses fell dead in its tracks. Ar the annual meeting held December, 27th, at Dunsford, S. S. No. 2, two persons were nominated for trustee, Robert Thurston and James Bell. The vote was taken by those who voted for Robert Thurston taking one side of the school house, and those who voted for James Bell, the other side. The chairman counted the votes and declared James Bell elected. The minutes of the meeting as forwarded to the inspector state that a poll was demanded, but the names of the persons demanding the poll are not mentioned. The chairman is not certain who demanded a poll, but Silas Thurston and Robert Thurston each affirm that they demanded a poll. The poll should have been opened at once. Instead of this the meeting was adjourned for two weeks. The adjournment was made in good faith under the impression that the law had been altered in that respect. At the adjourned meeting instead of having a poll opened the chairman took a shew of hands and declared Robert Thurston elected. The election of Robert Thurston and that of James Bell are therefore both set aside, and a new election is ordered to set aside, and a new election is ordered to take place on Saturday, the Srif day of February, at 10 o'clock. J. H. KNIGHT, P. S. Inspector.
