Love in a Balloon.

Some time ago I was staying with Sir O. P. Peach house, Fembrookshire. A great number of people there—all kinds of amusements going on. Driving, riding, fishing, shooting, everything in fact. Sir George and his wife, Fanny, was often my companion in these excursions, and I was considerably struck with her. For she was a girl to whom the epithet "stunning" applies better than any other that I am acquainted with. She could ride like Nimrod, she could drive like Jehu, she could row like Charon, she could dance like Terpsichore, she could run like Diana, she walked like Juno, and she looked like Venus. Al! she was a "stunner". You should have heard that girl whistle, and laugh you should have heard her laugh. She was truly a delightful companion. We rode together, drove together, fished together, walked together, danced together; I called her Fanny, and she called me Tom. All this could have but one termination you know.

I fell in love with her, and determined to take the first opportunity of proposing. So one day, when we went out together fishing on the lake, I went down on my knees amongst the gudgeons, seized her hand, pressed it to my waistcoat, and in burning accents entreated her to become my wife.

"Don't be a fool," said she. "Now drop it, do and put me a fresh rown."

"Oh, Fanny," I exclaimed, "don't talk about worms when marriage is in the question. Only says—"

"I tell you what it is now," she replied angrily, "if you don't drop it I'll pitch you out of the boat."

Gentlemen (said Jenkyns, with strong emotion), I did not drop it, and I give you my word of honor, with a sudden shove she sent me flying into the water; and then she put several nails between us, and burst into a fit of laughter that fortunately prevented her from going any further. I swam up and climbed into the boat. "Jenkyns," said I to myself, "revenge! revenge!" I disguised my feelings, I laughed—hidious mockery of mirth I laughed, pulled to the bank, went to the house and changed my clothes. When I appeared at the dinner table I perceived that everyone had been informed of my ducking—universal laughter greeted me. During dinner Fanny repeatedly whispered to her neighbor, and glanced at me. Southern laughter invariably followed. "Jenkyns," said I, "revenge!" The opportunity soon offered. There was to be a balloon ascent from the lawn, and Fanny had borrowed her father into letting her ascend with the aeronaut. I instantly took my plans; bribed the aeronaut to plead illness at the moment when the machine should have risen; learned from him the management of the balloon (though I understood that pretty well before and calmly awaited the result).

The day came. The weather was fine. The balloon was inflated. Fanny was in the car. Everything was ready, when the aeronaut suddenly fainted. He was carried into the house, and Sir George accompanied him to see that he was properly attended to. Fanny was in despair.

"Am I to lose my air expedition?" she exclaimed, looking over the side of the car. "Some one understands the management of this thing, surely! Nobody!"

"Tom," she called out to me, "you understand it, don't you?"

"Perfectly," I replied.

"Come along, then!" she cried, "be quick before papa comes back."

The company in general endeavored to dissuade her from her project, but of course in vain.

After a recent show of hesitation I climbed into the car. The balloon was cast off, and rapidly sailed heavenward. There was scarcely a breath of wind, and we rose almost straight up. We rose above the house, and she laughed and said, "how jolly."

We were higher than the highest trees, and she smiled and said it was very kind of me to come with her. "We are so high that the people below looked like mere specks, and she hoped that I thoroughly understood the management of the balloon."

"Now was my time," I understood the going up part, I answered; "to come down is not so easy," and I whistled.

"What do you mean?" she cried.

"Why, when you want to go up faster, you throw some sand overboard," I replied, suiting the action to the word.

"Don't be foolish, Tom," she said, trying to appear quite calm and indifferent, trembling uncommonly. "Foolish?" I said, "Oh, dear no; but whether I go along the ground or up in the air I like to go the pace, and so do you, Fanny. I know. Go it, you cripples!" and over went another sand-bag.

"Why, you're mad, madly," she whispered, in utter terror, and tried to reach the bags, but I kept her back. "Only with love, my dear," I answered, smiling pleasantly; "only with love for you. Oh, Fanny, I adore you; say you will be my wife." "I gave you an answer the other day," she replied, "one which I should have thought you would have remembered," she added, laughing a little, notwithstanding her terror.

"I remember it perfectly," I answered, "but I intend to have a different reply to that. You see those five sand-bags; I shall ask you five times to become my wife, every time you refuse I shall throw over a sand-bag. So, lady fair (as the old man would say) reconsider your decision, and consent to become Mrs. Jenkyns." "I won't," she said, "I never will, and let me tell you, that you are acting in a very impetuously way to press me thus." "You acted in a very ladylike way the other day, did you not, I rejoined, "when you knocked me out of the boat!" She laughed again, for she was a plucky girl and no mistake—a very plucky girl. "However," I went on, "it is no good arguing about it—I will only promise to give me your hand!"

"Never," she answered, "I'll go to Ursula Major first, though I've got a big enough bear here, in all conscience. Stay, you'd prefer Aquarius wouldn't you?"

She looked so pretty that I was almost inclined to let her off (I was only trying to frighten her, of course—I knew how high we could go safely well enough, and how valuable the life of Jenkyns was to this country); but resolution is one of the strong points of my character, and when I've begun a thing I like to carry it through, so I threw over another sand-bag, and whistled the "Dead March in Saul."

"Come, Mr. Jenkyns," she said, suddenly—"come, Tom, let us descend now, and I'll promise to say nothing whatever, about all this." I continued the execution of the "Dead March." But if you do not begin to descend at once I'll tell papa the moment I set foot on ground!"

I laughed, seized another bag, and, looking steadily at her, said, "will you promise to give me your hand?" "I've answered you already!" was the reply; "the solemn notes of the 'Dead March' resounded through the car. 'I thought you were a gentleman!' said Fanny, rising up in a terrible rage from the bottom of the car, where she had been sitting and looking perfectly beautiful in her wrath; 'I thought you were a gentleman, but I find I was mistaken; why a chimney sweep would not treat a lady in such a way. Do you know that you are using your own life as well as mine by your madness?' I explained that I adored her so much that to die in her company would be perfect bliss, so that I begged she would not consider my feelings at all. She dashed her beautiful hair from her face, and standing perfectly erect, looking like the Goddess of Anger (or Boadicea—if you can fancy that personage in a balloon)—she said: "I command you to begin the descent this instant." The "Dead March," whistled in a manner essentially gay and lively, was the only response. After a few minutes' silence I took up another bag and said, "We are getting rather high; if you do not decide soon we shall have mercury coming to tell us that we are trespassing—will you promise me your hand?" She sat in sulky silence in the bottom of the car. I threw over the sand. Then she tried another plan. Throwing herself upon her knees, and bursting into tears, she said—"Oh, forgive me for what I did the other day; it was very wrong, and I am very sorry. Take me home and I will be a sister to you." "Not a wife!" said I. "I can't—I can't," she answered.

Over went the fourth bag, and I began to think she would beat me after all, for I did not like the idea of going much higher. I would not give in just now, however. I whistled for a few moments, to give her time for reflection, and then said, "Fanny, they say that marriages are made in Heaven—if you do not take care ours will be solemnized there." I took up the fifth bag, and last. "Come," I said, "my wife in life, or my companion in death, which is it to be?" and I patted the sand-bag in my arms, as if it had been a baby. "Come, Fanny, give me your promise. I could hear her sobbing. I'm the most soft-hearted creature breathing, and would not pain any living thing, and I confess she had beaten me. I forgave her the ducking: I forgave her for rejecting me. I was on the point of flinging the bag back into the car, and saying, "Dearest Fanny, forgive me for trying to frighten you. Marry whosoever you will. Give your lovely hand to the lowest groom in your stables—endow with your priceless beauty the Chief of the Bank-i-wanki-Indians. Whatever happens, Jenkyns is your slave—your dog—your footstool. His duty, henceforth, is to go whithersoever you shall order, to do whatsoever you shall command."

I was just on the point of saying this, I repeat, when Fanny suddenly looked up, and said, with a queerish expression upon her face, "You need not throw that last bag over. I promise to give you my hand."

"With all your heart!" I asked quickly.

"With all my heart," she answered with the same strange look.

I tossed the bag into the bottom of the car, and opened the valve. The balloon descended.

Gentlemen (said Jenkyns, rising from his seat in the most solemn manner, and stretching out his hand as if going to take an oath); gentlemen, will you believe it, when we reached the ground, and the balloon had been given over to its recovered master—when I had helped Fanny tenderly to the earth, and turned towards her to receive anew the promise of her affection and her hand—will you believe it, she gave me a box on the ear that upset me against the car, saying at the same time, "There's my hand with all my heart," and running to her father, who at that moment came up, she related to him and the assembled company what she called my disgraceful conduct in the balloon, and ended by informing me that all of her hand that I was likely to get, had been already bestowed upon my ear, which assured me had been given—with all her heart.

There is sound reason in this. They claim the right to sell, and if their selling entails cost in the way of maintaining courts, police, prisons, poorhouses, etc., they ought not to ask that the people be taxed for such purposes, but ought willingly to bear all the burdens their business entails.

Brought to Justice.

Ontario Government Detective Murray arrived at Barrie last week and delivered up to justice a forger, the perpetrator of a gross fraud. It appears that in 1876 John Breckinridge, an immigrant from Scotland, came out to Muskoka with the object of settling there. Goo. Dobbin, who lived in the district, learned of Breckinridge's intention, and after manoeuvring succeeded in selling him a farm at the price of $1,200. Eight hundred dollars was paid in cash and Breckinridge gave his note for $400 for the balance, the note to be payable a year from date. Before the time had expired the Scotchman secured the money and went to Dobbin, saying that he was prepared to redeem the note. Dobbin said that the matter was all in order, but the Scotchman asked for the note to be produced. Dobbin then said, "I have lost it." Breckinridge was not satisfied, and enquired, "then what am I going to do?" Dobbin said that he was prepared to take an oath that it had been burned. "This satisfied the immigrant, who replied, 'if that is the case you take an oath that it is, all right. I will pay you the money,' and he paid Dobbin $400. Dobbin afterwards gave the identical note to a party as collateral security. The next stage was suiting on the note. The innocent victim failed to secure efficient legal aid, and judgment was allowed to go by default. The parties to the fraud then waited their opportunity to rain their victim. When Breckinridge had got in his crops an execution was put in and everything sold for a mere song. Dobbin was still not satisfied and forged a note for $400 purporting to have been signed by Breckinridge. At length the Scotchman had Dobbin arrested for fraud; but when the case was heard before a local magistrate it was discharged on the ground of irregularity. Within 24 hours the prisoner had left for Manitoba, leaving Breckinridge ruined. When all other means had failed the Ontario Government took up the case. Detective Murray was instructed to proceed to the North-west and arrest Dobbin. He was known to be living within one hundred miles of Winnipeg. The officer accomplished the task successfully and promptly. He soon found him farming a short distance from Morris, made the arrest and landed his prisoner at Winnipeg. There he was taken before Chief Justice Wallbridge on a writ of habeas corpus, and the court ordered that he be handed back into custody and taken to Ontario. Accordingly Murray left Winnipeg with his prisoner by way of Port Arthur, and proceeded to Barrie, and here he met Dobbin to the authorities. This smart piece of work reflects credit on an able officer. The charge preferred against the prisoner is that of forgery. He was taken before Justice Laird at Barrie, and was committed for trial.

"Fountain of Health."—This medicine is mildly but increasingly diuretic in its action, thus curing all diseases of the urinary organs, such as gravel, dropsy, Bright's disease.

O. E. Comstock, Caledonia, Minn., writes:—I was suffering the most excruciating pains from inflammatory rheumatism. One application of Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil afforded almost instant relief, and two bottles effected a permanent cure.

First Rate Evidence.

Often unable to attend business, being subject to periodic disorders of the kidneys. After a long struggle I tried Burdock Blood Bitters and was relieved by half a bottle, Mr. B. Turner, of Rochester, N. Y., takes the pains to write:—

The potential energy of the nervous system exists in the brain and other nerve ganglia in the form of a compound body, known as leithin, derived from the fatty matter, nitrogen and phosphate in our food. In all forms of nervous debility prostration of the vital forces results from a failure of supply of this reserve force of the nervous centres, owing to indigestion and mal-assimilation. Wheeler's Phosphates and Calisyva will make up the deficiency, and no imitation nor substitute should be used in its place.

A MARVELOUS STORY
 TOLD IN TWO LETTERS.
FROM THE SON: "28 Cedar St., New York, Oct. 28, 1882."
 "Gentlemen: My father resides at Glover, Vt. He has been a great sufferer from Scrofula, and the inclosed letter will tell you what a marvelous effect has had in his case. I think his blood must have contained the humor for at least ten years; but it did not show, except in the form of a scrofulous sore on the wrist, until about five years ago. From a few spots which appeared at that time, it gradually spread so as to cover his entire body. I assure you he was terribly afflicted, and an object of pity, when he began using your medicines. Now, there are few men of his age who enjoy so good health as he has. I could easily name fifty persons who would testify to the facts in his case.

 Yours truly,
 W. M. PHILLIPS.

FROM THE FATHER: "It is both a pleasure and a duty for me to state to you the benefit I have derived from the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla.
 Six months ago I was completely covered with a terrible humor and scrofulous sore. The humor caused an incessant and intolerable itching, and the skin cracked so as to cause the blood to flow in many places whenever I moved. My sufferings were great, and my life a burden. I commenced the use of the BLOOD PURIFIER in April last, and have used it regularly since that time. My condition began to improve at once. The sores have all healed, and I feel perfectly well in every respect—being now able to do a good day's work, although 73 years of age. Many inquire how I brought such a cure in my case, and I tell them, as I have here tried to tell you, AYER'S SARSAPARILLA. Glover, Vt., Oct. 31, 1882.
 YOURS GLOBALLY,
 HIRSH PHILLIPS."
AYER'S SARSAPARILLA cures Scrofula and all Scrofulous Complaints, Erysipelas, Sores, Ringworms, Itchings, Hemorrhoids, Tetter, and Eruptions of the Skin. It cures the blood of all impurities, aids digestion, stimulates the action of the bowels, and thus restores vitality and strengthens the whole system.
