but that she was mad about her daughter. A young man had been paying attentions to her daughter, and the mother had told the qirl to have nothing to do with him. In order-to make sure of this the old hady had held the girl by the arm while engaged in prayer. Very silently and slyly the young man came and knelt by the girl. The old lady, who was devoutedly praying, did not see him, nor did she see the other man who knelt with him. Nor did she at first know that the whispered words which fell from the lips of the three constituted the marriage service. It was when she found out that her daughter had thus been marriage overice.
